1 BOYS: "It's raining out. Let's make Gran'pa's new stick look like an umbrella and fool the old gentleman. This will be an easy way to have a good laugh."

2 BOYS: "Here's your umbrella, Gran'pa. It is too bad that you must go out while it is raining, but you won't mind while you have this fine and dandy new umbrella."

3 GRANDPA: "Ah, yes, a very fine and dandy umbrella. But there seems to be something wrong here. I must investigate. This looks like one of my canes."

4 GRANDPA: "Indeed, now, this looks as if you had prepared for a little joke. But, boys, you must get up just a little bit earlier."

5 GRANDPA: "You boys evidently do not know this is my new cane umbrella. With a simple twist of the wrist, as you observe, I will now produce the umbrella."

6 GRANDPA: "Now stay out of the wet, boys. I will be home early, remember. Don't laugh too heartily over your little joke on me. You might hurt yourselves, and then Grandpa would be awfully sorry. Ta, ta, boys."

The Very Interesting Discoveries Made by Miss Frances A. Kellor, Who Disguised Herself as a Servant Girl.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE A SERVANT

by A FASHIONABLE SOCIETY GIRL WHO LIVED OUT

"WELL SIS - OUT OF A JOB"!
"I GOT A JOB FOR YOU. PLENTY OF WORK"
RAISED THEIR LORGNETTES AND LOOKED ME OVER
"MADE IT IMPOSSIBLE TO GET OUT WITHOUT PAYING A FEE"
"TAKE HER AWAY!"
KERR

MISS FRANCES A. KELLOR, of New York, college graduate and of high social position, last Fall disguised herself as a servant girl and visited employment agencies in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago in search of household work—just to find out what the lot of a poor girl out of work really is in large American cities.

She has now written a book, "Out of Work," in which she relates her strange experiences, the hardships, the heartaches, the misery, the temptations and traps that are laid for a girl who tries to make a living in domestic service. In the following statement she tells in brief her trying adventures, hoping this will touch the hearts of mistresses and make the lot of servant girls more endurable.

To Mistresses—Did you employ last year a tall, handsome girl of refined manners, whose every thought would prove the ideal servant, only to be disappointed by her hasty departure, leaving the dishes unwashed and neglecting even to collect the few days' wages due her?

If so, it was Miss Frances A. Kellor, society girl, college graduate, who was only playing servant for the experience and to learn how it really seemed to be a general housework girl.

She confesses now to all the little deceits she practised, and asks forgiveness because of the object she had in view, to help girls who are trying to make a living in the big cities.

To Girls—Did you meet last year at an employment agency a fascinating girl whose dress and manners and soft toned speech made you a little suspicious—but who overcame your distrust, won your confidence, and got you to confide in her and tell her all your troubles?

Perhaps you have been startled at some time since at a face in a carriage, or in a theatre box, which seems strikingly like that one time bosom friend—but so transformed by fashionable dress and surroundings that you could not believe it the same girl.

But it was. It is Miss Frances A. Kellor, young society woman, who played the part of a servant girl for a whole year, just to find out how to help her less fortunate sisters.

Now she tells the whole story of her strange adventures.

BY MISS FRANCES A. KELLOR.

THERE will be many criticisms of what I have done, impersonating a servant, going to intelligence offices and working for a few days in private houses, just to see what the lot of the servant girl really is.

Because of these methods, undertaken in behalf of thousands of innocent city and country girls who have to undergo this bitter experience every year, in order to understand and better their lot, I feel that an apology is due to the many employers with whom I have engaged, but failed to appear, for my poor services in the house and for my early departures.

I am sure that in their estimation I have long since been added to the endless list of incompetents and household tramps.

I regret that I have consumed so much of the valuable time of the employer and the intelligence office, especially since I am forced to state so many uncomplimentary things, and they must think their unknown co-operation and confidence misplaced.

As a compensation for the false hopes which I may have raised in the hearts of employers, that they had at last found an "ideal servant," I can only hope them results may really send such to them.

I have tried to compensate the employment offices for all their efforts in my behalf by paying fees and not insisting with the bayonet of the law that the money be returned. To these offices, if they remember me at all, I am at best a "rounder" and not worth their while any way, so they can scarcely miss me.

But employers, intelligence offices and girls themselves drove me to this. Employers would not tell me how they fed, clothed and otherwise treated their employes. And I must agree with them that ordinarily this was "none of your business." But it was essential in order to understand the servant girl problem, so I became a servant girl to find out.

Girls would not tell me their troubles, the demands made upon them or their experiences, so I had to become one of them and mingle with them, and then they made me their confidante and poured out their tears and wrath.

Employment offices refused to say anything of their methods, or even let me in, so I became an applicant for a position and could wait about at will and be treated just like any one else.

At first I made many blunders. I tried to dress like a servant girl and become acquainted with them, but they held aloof until I had learned their language and habits and could talk in up-to-date slang about places and mistresses.

I was green about household duties and wages and rights, but so free has been their advice that I now possess the requisite "stand," so they associate with me.

When any one assumes a new personality it requires constant tact and self-possession. When I came straight so against an old acquaintance who was looking for a maid and was sent in to her to fill the place, something needed to be done at once, for the manager was ever watchful.

In a spirit of mischief I insisted that I would go with her, even though she artfully said:

"The wages are small. I give no privileges and there are seven children."

When an office manager said familiarly:

"Well, sis, out of a job?" and tried to lead me down the room by the hand, it was rather difficult to stifle pride and dignity and resent it.

I made acquaintances invaluable to the work, but they were apt to affect my peace of mind by appearing at inopportune times. Going uptown in the car one night I was reading quietly when a large Slavish woman suddenly rose and shouted in broken English:

"I got a job for you—plenty work now—come to-morrow."

Only visible exhibition and a promise to come satisfied her business zeal.

In another instance I was "cornered" and had to pose as a mother with a baby looking for work. Later, when in a restaurant with friends, I was suddenly confronted by a call from an employment office associate, who used my "office" name and asked after the baby.

But these were the least of my real difficulties. The treatment of servant girls in some offices is so brutal and humiliating that my increasing wonder is that servant girls are as good as they are. I can say I could not have continued to live on Rivington street, as old German woman said:

"That, is a bad, crowded neighborhood, and you had better say with me for 20 fer a night, though I can't keep you long." They sometimes offered to trust me for fees and I am convinced the only friends some girls have are these employment agents.

The intelligence offices I have already referred to are less the places of business. In them the housewife may recognize familiar scenes of office surroundings, experience of many interviews and weary hours of search for girls. Girls will recall the well-known pictures of the various places of waiting, of friendly gossip or parting with the last dollar and of initiation into the tricks of the trade.

But these things fall into insignificance beside the conscious, deliberate immorality of many offices and the traps which they set for their unwary and helpless victims. Of these the honest employer knows little, but the girl recalls many escapes.

The bare fact is that while advertising honest work and while furnishing it to some, many also degrade, debase and ruin others and later cast them out moral and physical wrecks.

Not only are they robbed of their small savings, herded like animals and subjected to many indignities by proprietors, but they must submit to association with and temptation by those who are greatly their inferiors in every way.

Notwithstanding the many humiliating interviews there have been many employers who have been considerate and even courteous to me, and I am sure if housework ever becomes my portion that I will seek them and offer myself. They always secured the help if it was at the employment office and other girls wondered what was the trouble and accused the office of partiality.

When engaged these girls came back to say good-by to some waiting friend, enthusiastic and happy.

Indeed it was these contacts with the truly genuine mistress which gave me much of my courage to go on with the work and meet the disagreeable things which I knew would come.

And if a word of apology is needed to those whom I have deceived and disappointed I would explain it was due to the considerate employer who treated me as though I had a soul as well as a body and for whom I would have labored if I could.

I do not believe that any American girl of poor but good family, especially from a small town, who has had the training required and possesses the sensibility necessary for an ideal maid, could have helped the rising flush that came into my face when employers calmly raised their lorgnettes and looked me over, point for point, exactly as one estimates animals at a stock show, or when they commented upon my clothes and the "size of your feet" as not belonging to the traditional working girl, or upon the condition of my hands as having "been too little hard work," or that I evidently "expect the mistress's clothes in addition to wages."

This was so not only in immigrant employment offices, but in the best offices, and these were real experiences and there were questions and comments even more humiliating.

I did excite a little curiosity, but there was no reason to believe that a mistress or publicity personal would not exercise a strict censorship over every action and impulse of a servant.

Girl after girl has come back into the waiting room and when anxiously asked if she was engaged would break out in wrath or tears and say:

"Oh, what do you think she asked me?" and would relate personalities which the finest analysis could not connect with requirements for a waitress or a maid.

One employer was about to engage me because I looked "promising," though she said, "you can't depend much on looks."

Then she asked me where I lived and I said on Ludlow street, which was true, in a settlement. She replied that she did not know that street, and unable to suppress a wicked uprising I replied:

"Dig off the Bowery and has a fall on it."

She held up her hands in horror, unconscious of my "promising" appearance, and said:

"You never, never will do for my house," and then as if I were some objectionable person she moved away and said to the agent:

"Take her away, bring me another girl at once." And she took one who had been the rounds of all the dirty, disreputable places in the negro quarter.

My experiences have not all been unpleasant and this was especially true in German offices. I often met with a sympathetic attitude and they were interested in my story. In one office when I said:

"I live on Rivington street," an old German woman said:

"That, is a bad, crowded neighborhood, and you had better say with me for 20 fer a night, though I can't keep you long." They sometimes offered to trust me for fees and I am convinced the only friends some girls have are these employment agents.

What's the Matter with the Shape of Our Noses?

THE shape of the nose is a thing which troubles all of us, more or less, at some period of our existence. Whatever shape we feel that we should have been better pleased if it had been formed according to some different pattern; this is on the principle of always wanting what we do not possess.

In speaking of this or that feature, we often say that Nature has given us this or that; the remark is correct, as a rule, but persons who possess a short nose may make a mistake in saying it. As a matter of fact, it can be shown that the nasal organ might have been longer, in hundreds of cases, if attention had been paid to it earlier in life. The shortness of growth in these cases is due to some trouble with the organ of smell.

When a child speaks in a peculiar manner, when it finds difficulty in breathing freely through the nose, then an examination should be made. Some children have, to all appearances, a perpetual cold, manifested only by "stuffiness," but the real state of the case is that they are suffering from adenoids, or some other trouble that can easily be remedied.

The importance of being able to breathe freely through the nose cannot be overestimated; one of the greatest men in history said that the power to take in plenty of breath through the nasal organ meant a clear brain, clear lungs and a clear heart. Your success in life, as well as your personal appearance, may be spoiled by an ailment which to some people seems of little consequence.

Adenoids will sometimes prevent the growth of the nose, and the affected person may grow up with a very stubby specimen. A small boy, afflicted with adenoids, as it was afterward discovered, was taken to an expert in order to ascertain why the child's nose did not grow. A clear operation was performed and the medical man enjoined a kind of massage of the organ several times a day, with a view to increasing the size of the nose as the child increased in years. In order to explain to the little one what to do, as "massage" was too big a word, he said that he must pull his nose. Every day the father, on returning in the evening, asked the seemingly strange question: "Have you pulled your nose to-day?" One evening he received the startling answer: "No, papa, I pulled my nose for me!"

AND NOW LITTLE ETHEL BARRYMORE?

Is the Ill-Fortune Which Hangs Over the Barrymores Just Throwing Its Threatening Shadow About the Lovely Little Girl Who Has Charmed Society Here and Abroad?

HAS the shadow of tragedy that has change that travel brings, he cannot prevent followed the Barrymores for two generations fallen upon Ethel, the popular young star and the petted stage darling of the most exclusive society in New York and London? Is the stage to lose this exquisitely pretty, talented and most charming young woman?

The question is being asked in the two worlds, so near and yet so far apart, which know her equally well—the world of the footlights on both sides the ocean and the drawing rooms of New York, Paris and London, where this most sad foreboding is now being whispered.

It would be a great pity if Ethel Barrymore had to leave the stage. She has done so many things to charm us all.

She was so exquisite in the "Country Mouse," in "Carrots," in "Cousin Kate" and in "Captain Jinks."

Little Ethel Barrymore has made America, and even England, conquerable by her loveliness.

She has quite the most remarkable career of any girl of her years on the stage. She has been chaperoned by the Duchess of Sutherland and made an intime of Stafford House.

She has dined with the Duke and Duchess of Connaught—a most privileged concession, because the Duke is the only living brother of King Edward and of most importance.

She has spent a week at Warwick Castle as the guest of the still regnant beauty, the Countess of Warwick; she has been painted by Sargent the great painter; she has been feted and courted by the world of highest fashion in both England and in America. She has fresh, enlivening quickness of charm. There has been so much adulation thrown at her feet—and there is so much prospect for her every way IF?

That Miss Barrymore is ill there is no doubt, although she appears every night in Boston in her role of "Sunday," written for her by three London actors who admired her.

Yet her face has got a bit haggard. Her eyes are dimmed. The languor that has characterized her every movement is more pronounced.

For months she has had an alarming cough that grows worse instead of disappearing as the season advances.

She faints from exhaustion after many of the performances. The management of "Sunday" and the physician who attends the young star decline to make any announcement, reassuring or otherwise, to

"How I Think I Must Look as 'Carrots'"—Sketch of Herself Made by Ethel Barrymore.

The Latest Photograph of Miss Ethel Barrymore

Moreover, she is known among them as "the girl who never pays." Her morning mail is heavy with beseeching invitations from society. She accepts them all.

Her Madness After Midnight Drives.

From the hour of the morning mail until the close of the performance at night she never stops in her rounds of visits to dressmakers, milliners, her luncheon with Mrs. A., of Fifth avenue; her tea at Mrs. B.'s, her calls, her early dinner at some obliging friend's. After the play there is always the after-theatre supper at Sherry's or the Waldorf-Astoria. And that over, she does not seek her bed.

She has formed the habit of a long drive after supper, usually with some woman friend or relative, and often she does not get to her room until 4 or 5 in the morning. On the night of her debut as a star in "Capt. Jinks" she did not go to bed for forty-eight hours. After the performance she supped and drove, and, as she frankly admitted with the candor that is one of her charms, too nervous and anxious to sleep, she sat and waited in her room for the arrival of the morning papers that she might know what the critics thought of her.

With the same charming candor Miss Barrymore has always confessed that she smokes cigarettes, smokes a great many of them. And, while this practice has not discolored her exquisite teeth, nor her slim, white finger tips, it has had an ill effect upon her nerves.

Outwardly the calmest and most self-contained of young women, Ethel Barrymore is known among them as a "nervous wreck."

Mental "hoos" from the pit broke her spell.

These are the reasons given for the imminent breakdown of Ethel Barrymore, the closing of the threatening tragic shadow about her, at twenty-five.

There have been no more popular stars on the American stage than Georgie Drew Barrymore and the young Englishman, Maurice Barrymore, in private life Herbert Blythe, when they were married.

Miss Drew was the loveliest and favorite daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Drew, Sr., and the sister of Joan Drew, the long reigning matinee idol. America has never had a better comedienne than Georgie Drew. It has never had a lovelier female face. Her bubbling, buoyant spirits made her individuality fascinating. She was the favorite of the theatregoers, the toast of both vivants, so lovable was her sparkling nature, even the admiration of women.

For a time her marriage was ideal. Mr. and Mrs. Barrymore played in the same companies and travelled with her mother, Mrs. John Drew, that most delightful and regretted player, and her brother, then a juvenile leading man.

When the little daughter Ethel was born they hailed her as a new star, and Maurice Barrymore declared that if she grew to be half as lovely as her mother he would be proud indeed. When Lionel and his younger brother, John, were born, the famous comedienne's highest hope was that they should be as gallant, as handsome, as talented as their father.

There was but one fear. She prayed that the shadow of tragedy might be averted from their lives.

For the Englishman had been frank at the outset of his wooing. He told her that he was the son of a clergyman, in whose family there was no stain, unless the hand of tragedy had made it. There was, he told her, a relative, the most intellectual and distinguished of the family, who was dying in a retreat, of a nervous disorder.

The girl had laughed at the far-away shadow. Now in the beautiful new gravity of motherhood she remembered, and prayed that the shadow might pass.

The Tragedy in the Life of Little Ethel at Thirteen.

Ethel Barrymore was five years old when the domestic life of the comedienne and her gifted actor playwright husband began to be less ideal. No one can say when the divorcement of two souls begins. They themselves do not always know the cause. But Georgie Drew Barrymore and her husband began to have lives apart from each other. Their aims and interests and friends were not, as they had been, in common.

At this period the comedienne summed up the situation in a mot that passed among the friends of both. Maurice Barrymore lingered at the poker table late one night. As he returned in the morning he met his wife settling out, dressed for the street.

"Good morning, my dear," he said. "Where are you going?"

"I am going to mass," she said. "You can go to the place that mass keeps people out of."

Soon the husband and wife began playing in different companies. They seldom met. Their children were placed in schools, Ethel being sent to the Academy of Notre Dame, in Philadelphia. The breach had grown to a width past bridging.

Once Mrs. Barrymore, angry with a rival who had been coquetting with her husband, went to the rival's apartment, in New York. Not finding her at home, she wrecked the apartments as effectually as only a cyclone or an angry woman could. On top of a mountain heap of debris that had been the rival's furniture she left her card.

It was soon after this incident that she who was still called "Merry Georgie Drew" suddenly lost her old buoyant spirits and her superb health. She was very tired of her the performances. Sometimes in sheer exhaustion she fainted. She had a terrible some cough. She drooped as a flower drops before it withers. The doctors, puzzled, said that she must leave the East at once, that unless she had a change of scene they would not answer for her recovery. It was the same phrase that Ethel Barrymore's physicians are using now

As Georgie Drew Barrymore was taken to Los Angeles. With her went her 13-year-old daughter. At first the steamy coast of Southern California rested her. All its girlish spirits. She lived out of doors all day, inhaling the soft air from the Pacific Ocean. She talked of her plans for the next season. She even planned adventures at her little daughter's school.

But one night she talked restlessly in her sleep. She muttered strange words that reminded the doctors and nurses of the she caught her little daughter's hand to hers and sobbed. As the sun rose she died.

Passengers on the southern route from California noticed a pale, sorrowful eyed child, travelling alone in the Pullmans. Sometimes she read from a child's book in her lap. Other she cried quietly curling down in the berth, her bright figure [illegible] in her loose black cloak, her handkerchief biding her small face. When the train stopped longer than usual she ran out of the car and hurried to the baggage car, looking at its brown side and shining roof as though they hid something precious from her. The baggageman spoke kindly to her, but shook his head. When she came back to the dark green car her eyes were red and her mouth quivered.

"It is Georgie Drew Barrymore's little girl. She is taking the remains home to be buried," said the conductor.

The Tragedy of Her Father During Her Smartest Successes.

At Chicago Maurice Barrymore met her again as they switched the engine on the long box to another train. And the man and the child followed, weeping.

Two years later Ethel Barrymore made her debut on the stage in her grandmother's company.

Afterward she travelled with her "Uncle Jack," and when she played the part of a maid, enamored of a crusty old scholar, the critics said: "Here is another with the Barrymore cleverness. But she is a Barrymore in everything. She does not resemble the Drews."

From one success to another the girl went in America. She starred in "Captain Jinks," in "Cousin Kate" and in "Sunday." She won the adulation of society, and of that considerable part of the public that is not in society, but pays for its seats at the theatre. In the glow of American success she went to London, hoping for a greater success. Instead she met failure, [illegible] returned to America. [illegible]

It was her brother who brought her the news late one night that her father had suddenly gone insane on the stage of a vaudeville house in New York. He was sent to the Amityville Sanitarium. His daughter [illegible] She [illegible] She ordered that no money be spared. She visited him often, and when she returned from the visits she was deeply depressed, although none but her most intimate friends would have guessed it.

"It is part of my creed to let no one know my troubles if I can help it," she said.

Maurice Barrymore grew steadily worse. He was taken to Sanford Hall, Flushing, L. I., where one of his companions [illegible] boards, Miss Georgia Lawton, was also an inmate. HERE IS THE MOST PERFECT FOOT.

MRS. T. SHAW HALL OF NEW YORK CITY WHO WINS THE SOLID GOLD SLIPPER

MISS HALL'S FOOT—SIDE VIEW.

FOR THE SMALLEST, PRETTIEST, AND MOST PERFECT FOOT.

THIS AMERICAN-JOURNAL-EXAMINER SOLID GOLD SLIPPER PRESENTED BY THE HEARST SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS TO MRS. T. SHAW HALL, NEW YORK CITY 1905.

MISS ETHEL C. DOVEY OF PLATTSMOUTH, NEB., WHOSE FOOT IS HIGHLY COMMENDED.

THE PRETTY FOOT OF MISS MARGARET ERVIN OF CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

By Mrs. Howard Chandler Christie.

MRS. HALL'S foot is undoubtedly the prettiest I have seen in the Sunday American-Journal Examiner gold slipper contest. From the middle of the side of the foot to the toe it is perfect. It is in perfect proportion. It is not quite high enough to please a Chinaman, but for Americans it is pretty as it is. The foot is strong and well kept, which is one of the chief features of a foot. And the toes are worth all the rest of the foot put together. Hall is another essential thing to make a foot, which for centuries have been studied out of their original beautiful.

By Mr. Alfred J. Cammeyer.

MRS. HALL has a most exceptional foot. It possesses that rare combination—smallness, prettiness and perfect shape. The instep is a trifle high, the merest fraction too high to be absolutely the prettiest I have seen in the Sunday American-Journal Examiner gold slipper contest. From the middle of the side of the foot to the toe it is perfect. It is not quite high enough to please a Chinaman, but for Americans it is pretty as it is. The foot is strong and well kept, which is one of the chief features of a foot. And the toes are worth all the rest of the foot put together. Hall is another essential thing to make a foot, which for centuries have been studied out of their original beautiful.

By M. Otillio Piccirilli.

MRS. HALL'S foot is perfect. It conforms to the best rules of proportion, which is that the foot be as long as the hand, also that the length of the foot be to the height of the body as one to seven and a half; that is, that the height be seven and a half times as great as the length of the foot. I remember what makes the foot artistically perfect is the even distribution of the fatty tissue that lies between the bone and the skin. Usually there is too little of this and the foot is thin. There is too much and the foot is puffy in spots. Perhaps the best test to use in judging a foot by its outline is a cast of marble. Cast in marble the foot of Mrs. Hall is a foot would have delighted a sculptor of old Greece.

By Mrs. T. Shaw Hall.

MY small foot is mine by inheritance. I never wear anything else. My mother and grandmother had little feet. We are American of New England origin.

We think our feet are small and shapely because we have never worn shoes a trifle or too short. I always wear shoes two sizes larger than my feet, as that gives big room for the toes. Many women trample on them in the street cars that will step on the often tender pulled toes and not be polite.

I never wear an extra high heel. That ruins, as you soon I wear size or less. I find also keeps to keep the feet soft. I have never worn woollen hose in the coldest weather. Their tendency is, I think, to make the feet perspire and turn cold, and possibly in the winter

FOR THE SAKE OF THE CHILDREN.

The Fifth Chapter in the Romance of Mr. Phipps Who will Marry his Wife Again!

Little Helen Phipps.

THE fifth and most amazing chapter of all in the extraordinarily sensational history of the Phippses has at least been reached. It contains the information that Lawrence C. Phipps would be glad to remarry his former wife, Genevieve Chandler Phipps.

Every one must remember the matrimonial difficulties of the Phippses, for they were settled in a glare of almost unparalleled publicity. They included a retinue of detectives, bribed nurses, automobiles, special trains all revolving about two little children, girls, both of them, Dorothy, just six, and Helen aged four.

"I must have my children," cried the multi millionaire, and he proceeded to hid [illegible] little daughters from the [illegible] Switzerland in New York, where the mother had fled with them.

The news columns of the country were at once filled with the unsavory details of the [illegible] case. The chapter entitled "Mar[illegible]" had been written in 1897, it was followed by what may be called "The Flight of the Wife." Then came "The Kidnapping of the Children;" then "The Highly Sensational Divorce." And now the most thrilling chapter of all is announced. It is called variously, "The Triumph of Mrs. Phipps" and "The Return Home of the Phippses."

In Pittsburg they discuss the details of this last chapter with the interest interest.

"It isn't decent," says one.

"And yet, after all, nothing would seem to be more proper than for a man to marry his own wife," says another.

"And how about the fascinating physician, Dr Gallagher?" pipes an inquisitive third.

The city is divided into two camps. But both camps are agreed as to Mrs. Phipps's triumph. The most remarkable triumph when one remembers that not more than four months ago Mr. Phipps, in his petition for divorce, virtually stripped his wife of all reputation and pointed out her complete unfitness for the control and custody of the children.

Four months ago the father of Dorothy and Helen Phipps petitioned for their exclusive control.

The terms of the divorce entered about the children.

The terms of the remarriage seem to be equally bound up in the children.

FOR THE GOOD OF THE CHILDREN!

Henry Phipps, the very rich uncle of Lawrence Phipps, the man who is said to have given Lawrence the opportunity to become a millionaire, the man back of him and his fortune insists upon his nephew's remarriage.

"For the good of the children I demand it!" in Pittsburg the report is current that these were the words of Henry Phipps to his nephew.

"For the good of the children I yield," Lawrence Phipps has answered.

"For the good of the children," echoes Mrs. Phipps, "I will forgive all."

The children are at present with their mother in Pittsburg, but her custody of them by the decree of the court which granted Mr. Phipps the divorce she must shortly relinquish them.

Her eyes wander from the little one, a mere baby with blue eyes and flaxen curls, to the older baby, too, a little toddler just beginning to ask questions.

"Papa's comin'" is a game these children play. They haven't the slightest idea that papa's coming may mean their leaving their mamma and, as you may well imagine, their mamma hasn't it in her heart to tell them. How can she tell these two little darlings that because she and their papa have quarrelled they must suffer for it; they must [illegible] affections; they must be deprived of a mother's care for six months every year? How can she?

Every one in Mrs. Phipps's household carefully avoids the subject of papa's whereabouts, while about them the children plan for "papa's coming." They take out their very best dolls and dress them in their very best clothes; they get out their china dishes and set the table for papa's tea party; they recite to each other their prettiest rhymes and then, suddenly, one cried out: "Papa'll see our Christmas!"

UNCLE HENRY INSISTS.

This Christmas was hers, but by the decree of the divorce court the next is to be Mr. Phipps's. The children are to spend it with him away from their mother. He is to fill their stockings, decorate their tree, be their Santa Claus. And mamma! Mrs. Phipps says she is certain that she will hear ringing in her ears every hour that her children are away from her their cry asking her to come back.

Mr. Henry Phipps, the multi millionaire uncle, says there is no doubt that these children need a mother's care. He says they must have it. He insists upon it by right of the millions with which he has endowed his nephew. He has gettioned and now he demands.

According to the many friends of the Phippses, Uncle Henry is wise. He, as well as others, have seen symptoms which would indicate that Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Phipps, even while they waged most bitter war, were still interested in each other.

"As far as Lawrence is concerned," they said, "it will be easy enough, for by every indication he has never lost his admiration for the girl he fell in love with some seven years ago. But how about Mrs. Lawrence? Will she ever, ever forgive all that she was made to suffer during the divorce proceedings?"

The mothers of Pittsburg here for some time whispered among themselves that in order to keep her two little girls Mrs. Phipps would yield to the demand of her husband's Uncle Henry.

She will yield with conditions. The conditions so far made public insist that all the debts incurred in fighting her divorce case shall be paid by Mr. Phipps. This will include the $35,000 which Hart McKee whose name was very much connected with the divorce proceedings, claimed soon after the Phipps divorce.

Finally, if she remarries Lawrence Phipps, Mrs. Phipps is to have the entire control of her little girls. They are not to be taken away from her at all—ever. She cannot be remarried inside of a year from the time of the divorce, not until next October in fact, and all that time, during Mr. Phipps's second courtship, she is to have her children.

They may see their papa when he returns from Europe, and he may see them, subject to mamma's orders.

There seems to be no doubt about it that Mr. Phipps is in love with his wife. Whatever trouble he gave her was occasioned by his jealousy of her, and many wise philosophers have long since agreed that jealousy is merely a supreme form of love. He was jealous, it was said, of Dr. Thomas Gallagher. He was jealous, it was also said, of Hart McKee, her cousin by marriage.

In an exclusive interview, published in this paper last November, with this same Mr. McKee, he said: "The best proof that I am not going to marry Mrs. Phipps is to be found in the fact that in Denver she and her former husband are living within a stone's throw of each other, meeting daily, and that Phipps himself has so far recovered his reason that he stopped the other day to pick up a rose that his former wife had dropped as she got out of a carriage.

"She will remarry her own husband!"

This prediction was made by a man who knows what he is talking about.

The fact that Mr. Phipps had picked up a rose dropped from the hand of his wife travelled like a shot through Pittsburg.

THEY SMOOTH COURTSHIP.

Then followed the news that the mansion in Pittsburg, to which Mrs. Phipps relinquished all claim, for the sum of $250,000, was being overhauled from top to bottom, made over just [illegible] new, dismissed everything that could possibly remind her of the past, of any of the disagreeable things that might possibly have occurred there.

The house is in the hands of plumbers and upholsterers and decorators. Past its massive front doors float all sorts of rumors of its new gorgeousness. It is to be, they say, the most magnificent house in all Pittsburg, a fitting home wherein to pass a second honeymoon with the woman who, in spite of all sorts of difficulties and disagreements, Lawrence Phipps still loves. And, moreover, they who know say that it is all its new gorgeousness to be transferred back to the name of Mrs. Lawrence Phipps.

Immediately after her divorce Mrs. Phipps went to Denver with her two little daughters, [illegible]

Little Dorothy Phipps

"How very strange," said every one. Very strange, because it was known that Mr. Phipps was in Denver, and every one supposed that the chief purpose of Mrs. Phipps's life would be to avoid meeting Mr Phipps. Not a bit of it. To Denver she went, and in Denver she rented the residence of J. M. Walker, on Pearl street. It didn't seem to disturb her in the least that Mr. Phipps was occupying that splendid house on Colfax avenue, and that she was bound to meet him constantly.

"What do you suppose she will do?" asked the people in Denver who had watched the bitter, bitter fight between the husband and wife. They didn't have to guess about what she would do long or about what he would do at all.

Almost immediately following the return of Mrs. Phipps to Denver Mr Phipps's automobile was seen in front of her door.

The people in Denver explained it seemingly. "He has of course called to see the children," they said. His certainly was a most devoted father, for it began to be observed that he called constantly upon the children. And finally, for the sake of the children, of course, the father and mother both appeared at the same picnic.

To be sure, the children were there, but it was observed that Mr. and Mrs. Phipps smiled at each other and talked to each other.

"Of course, about the children," people explained.

Then there came a day when Mr. and Mrs. Phipps were seen to meet without the presence of the children at all, and to all intents and purposes not to talk of the children.

Mrs Phipps was standing in the door way of the Adams Hotel trying to attract the attention of a cabman a quarter of a block away.

"I won't me," said Mr. Phipps. And he whistled loud and long. "Excuse me for whistling," he said, "in the presence of a lady, but it is the only way I can get that cab."

"Whistle as much as you please," said Mrs. Phipps, with one of her most gracious smiles, "and as long, too," she added with a manner that any man, even a divorced husband, might take as a challenge.

Then when the cab drove up there was only a second pause after Mr. Phipps had spo[illegible] the cabman drew

"May I be asked

[illegible] she answered. And [illegible] after her.

After [illegible] about ren[illegible]arage broke [illegible] Mr and Mrs [illegible] were [illegible] and [illegible] together, and [illegible] were not along. And [illegible] so supposedly [illegible] have both papa and mamma all [illegible] the same time.

Everyone began to predict strange things, the strangest thing of all in the sensational history of the Phippses.

Now they say there is no doubt of it. Hart McKee is married to the widow of Hugh Tevis, and is over the water. Mr. Phipps at his wife's request recently called upon him and paid his wife's debt in full. Dr. Thomas Gallagher is in Pittsburg, to be sure, but Mrs. Phipps has denied that she will ever, ever think of marrying him.

Mr. Phipps is due in America. It is his turn to have the children. "Are you going to give them up?" Mrs. Phipps is asked by her intimate friends.

"Wait and see," she says, with an enigmatical smile which has in it a suggestion of triumph. Yet—as you read this, she may have [illegible] long ago.

But to be able to win back one's own husband must certainly be the greatest triumph of a fascinating woman and almost beyond any other possibility of a woman's heart.

How the Energy of Earthquakes Has Been Measured.

DR. B. VON KOVESLIGETHY, of Budapest, has calculated the exact amount of energy in horse power that old Mother Earth required to perform her various earthquakes during the last seven years. He charges that our planet has been wasting energy in this form of pleasantry at the ruinous rate of seventy billion horse-power every second of the day and night. If she had spent this energy in the form of a present to her children instead of trying to make their homes rattle, we could all be living in luxury and having our work done for us.

As nobody has experimented with artificial earthquakes for obvious reasons, it may seem wonderful that the scientist should find any basis to begin his figuring from. There was just one thing he could use, called the "initiative" of the earth.

The pioneer pole should point steadily to a fixed point in the sky, but it doesn't. Instead, it wabbles and jerks one way and then another to an extent that is readily observed and recorded by astronomers.

Dr. Koveligethy, working on the theory that nothing but earthquakes could have caused the wabbling, went over the astronomers' records for the last eight years and added it all up. Then, knowing the weight of the earth, it was comparatively simple mathematics to find out how much power it took.

The Confessions of a Hold-Up Man.

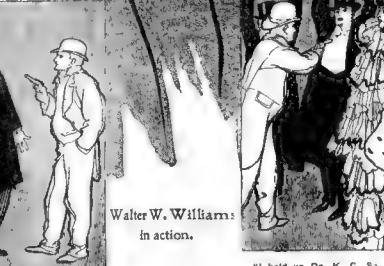
"The Hold-Up Holds the Best Job in the Whole List; the Other Fellows Have to Work for a Living."

Made by the Most Expert Highwayman the Country Has Ever Seen, Who Went Armed with Dynamite and Is a Student of Human Nature.

By Walter W. Williams.

(In Jail at Denver, Col.)

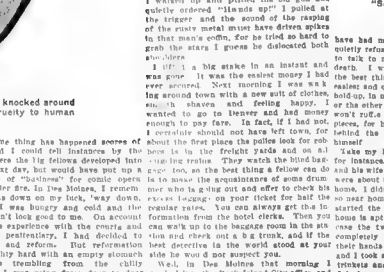
"He was built like a fighter. * * Well, you never saw such a scared man in all your life."



Walter W. Williams in action.

"I held up Dr. K. C. Sapero and his wife and Gustav Geier just as they were about to open the door of the Sapero home."

"The way the robbers must have been knocked around—according to his story—was simply cruelty to human beings."



"Several other robbers then came up and were finally put to flight."

"There were four men in a saloon at the time, and, with the bartender's, ten hands went up instantly."

I CONSIDER myself an artist and far leys and sailed around the corner. In about above the hunting course work of a five minutes I was back again on the street pinch clincher, burglar or bank wreck- about a block away and, do you know, er. The hold-up holds the best job in the that fellow was just coming to his senses. whole list. The other fellows have to In a saloon about an hour later I heard work for a living. I've done safe- lots of talk about a hold-up man. At least [illegible] I've worked [illegible] and I'm not ashamed of my record. At least [illegible] I've worked [illegible] ted" they will look it just the same or [illegible] for reason or other. And spotting is hard work, too. And even after everything is ready—look at the work. It's like the tree chopper in the forest compared with the delicate strokes of the engraver's tool. And the danger, too, is much greater than street work. A man or woman hearing a strange noise in the house will think of a gun first thing and begin blasting away just from sheer fright. On the street the hold-up stands no such chances. It's almost like taking candy from a baby. Only the victim is too scared to cry. If I could get into a crowd of a hundred men and women and round them up without danger of outside interference for a few minutes I could lift the whole crowd and get away with the "goods" just as easily as I have hundreds of times relieved individuals or smaller parties.

The [illegible] of fear seems to grow within itself the more persons there are to handle. One man scared speechless will give it to the others as if by contagion. In an instant all are speechless and two hundred hands point heavenward. And more than that. The active mind in the victims seems to go entirely blank, and the passive take possession of the functions. This is the only reason I can see for the most phenomenal success I have had to follow. I don't believe every one will [illegible] be as easy as I have been, but I'm sure of it in the majority of cases.

As soon as I [illegible] I stopped a man on Curtis [illegible] He was a strapping big fellow and I have weighed over 200 [illegible] He was built like a fighter and was undoubtedly an athlete. I "spotted" him at a drug store on the corner of Garfield avenue and Barling street, as I he at peering to be a man with money. My judgment was not easily ratified. He wore a charm with a huge diamond [illegible] and I was "up against it" and needed that stone. It was the most promising strike I had seen for several weeks. So I waited a few minutes and right in front of [illegible] I stopped him. Well, you never saw such a scared man in all your life. He actually trembled and his knees gave way and the fellow would have fallen had I not pushed him against a building and braced him up. I could see his eyes very plainly, and the change from the bright, snappy clearness I had noticed in the drug store to the cold, glassy gaze almost scared me, for I thought the fellow had died from fright.

I "lifted" the watch, chain and diamond charm and also a big wad of bills and was about to move when the fellow mechanically reached inside his vest and pulled out a wallet filled with the long green. I grabbed it and then backed off and fadged into one of the [illegible] some "guys" talking about the hold-up and they explained that the big fellow had hit the first robber and probably killed him, that several other robbers then came up and while one carried the body away others killed the big man who fought them off and in the scuffle his watch and chain were torn off and lost and that the robbers were first to put in fight. The next day there was an equally ridiculous story in the papers and I just howled with amusement. That fellow who had been scared absolutely stiff the night before had developed the most wonderful imagination I ever heard of, and the way the robbers must have been knocked around—according to his story—was simply cruelty to human beings.

The same thing has happened scores of times and I could tell instances by the dozen where the big fellows developed into heroes next day, but would have put up a good line of "nothings" for comic opera while under fire. In Des Moines, I remember, I was down on my luck, "way down, in fact. I was hungry and cold and the world didn't look good to me. On account of a little experience with the courts and later the penitentiary, I had decided to turn square and reform. But reformation came mighty hard with an empty stomach and legs trembling from the chilly weather. I was going from door to door looking for something to eat, when my eye caught the gleam of a revolver barrel in an ash can. I pulled it out and found it was a discarded pistol with the lock broken and the cylinder so badly rusted it would not revolve.

It was the sign from hell, I suppose, for it was the one thing that drove me back into the profession. In an instant I was no longer my Former self. The hunger and shivering disappeared, and I knew that before morning I would be warm and well fed. I could no more resist that message from the occult world than I could fly, and at it I went. Within an hour I had one man spotted, and as he went home soon after dark I followed. I was afraid he would take a car and leave me behind, for I had not the nickel to ride. But the fates who had put the gun in my hands willed otherwise, and I walked after the man in a very happy spirit, for I am a fatalist, you know. I could not possibly lose. I think it was just in front of Dr. Breden's church—there are a dozen churches in a bunch in that end of town, and I don't know them apart—I prepared for the stroke. I walked up and pulled the old gun and quietly ordered "Hands up!" I pulled at the trigger and the sound of the rasping of the rusty metal must have driven spikes in that man's coffin, for he tried so hard to grab the stars I guess he dislocated both shoulders.

I lift a big stake in an instant and was gone. It was the easiest money I had ever secured. Next morning I was walking around town with a new suit of clothes, smooth shaven and feeling happy. I wanted to go to Denver and had money enough to pay fare. In fact, if I had not, I certainly should not have left town, for about the first place the police look for rob bers is by the freight yards and on the outgoing trains. They watch the blind baggage too, so the best thing a fellow can do is to make the acquaintance of some drummer who is going out and offer to check his excess baggage on your ticket for half the regular rates. You can always get that information from the hotel clerks. Then you can walk up to the baggage room in the station and check out a big trunk, and if the best detective in the world stood at your side he would not suspect you.

Well, in Des Moines that morning I walked into the Rock Island City office, and who at the first person I ran into was the man of the night before. He was telling a fellow named George Kline and a Grand Army man named Pickell how he had been held and bullied a robber the night before and had him down and was holding him until an officer or help should arrive when somebody hit him with a brick and dased him, and in an instant the robber had escaped. "No; I didn't lose a cent, not even my temper," the fellow was saying, and I almost shouted with laughter, and actually bumped into him as I passed out with my ticket in my hand.

That fellow never knew how he might have had me. I believe if a man should quietly refuse to put up his hands and start to talk to me he would scare me half to death. I would know in an instant that for his drink and get out, and hear some the best thing to do would be to pick the easiest and quickest avenues of escape. In a fellow say, 'I don't like that man's eye.' panicss and they were certain they could But when you keep your mind off business, identify at least one. Why, they were so and think of eating turkey or drinking badly scared they couldn't identify themselves. But I have noticed one peculiar thing about this identifying matter. While the victim is scared speechless, he sometimes unconsciously gets a mental photograph of the robber that comes to the surface of the brain days and even weeks after the event. But the day after—never. The victim's egotism or something works up his imagination until the robber seems to be eight feet tall and have horns flashing in the green and yellow flames. I have always been amused at the published descriptions of myself. I do not recall in single instance in which my probable weight was given at less than 180 pounds. I weigh just 130.

The same things occurred when I "struck up" the Gardiner saloon on Court place. I walked in quietly and called for a drink. While the bartender turned his back to draw the beer I pulled the gun and ordered hands up. There were four men in the saloon at the time and with the bartender ten hands went up instantly. While I was going through the men and they were lined up at the wall another fellow walked in. He stood still a moment as if in doubt and then took his place along the waiters exhibit. I supplied the cash register and backed out and walked around the block, and next day I read another account of the bravery of the victims.

And now let me explain a psychological fact. Had I gone into the saloon and at once ordered all hands up, I would certainly have received a bullet or two, for two of the men were armed and the bartender had an ugly looking weapon near the till. But I walked in without the least hesitation. I tried to think of something pleasant, for had I put my mind on the hold-up something might have communicated a feeling of uneasiness to the victims. I have tried it a dozen times, and have your victim in a heap. If he has a gun the quick motions will keep him from using it. Upsetting him will be a ability of hitting you. More than likely the ball will go to the ground or strike in the leg.

If the play comes first right to first grab the robber's right wrist in which he has the gun, do so quickly and turn your back, pull the wrist and arm over your shoulder and then try to throw the robber over your head like a sack of wheat. You will probably hear the fellow's arm snap and break, and if you have strength enough to throw him you may fracture his skull. But you have the advantage of having him at your mercy and helpless.

If you are carrying a rifle or a stick, don't try to swing it around your head and brain the fellow. If he knows his business he will take a step forward and you may break your arm over his shoulder. The way to do is to make a quick upward push with all your strength, trying to run the end of your stick into the fellow's face. That will do the business in an instant, and if you put a little force in the push the robber will think of going into a Sunday school and getting a class of children to teach.

Under the present circumstances he has a sure thing, but let him change his methods and his control over the scared and speechless victims is certain to wane, and then he might as well get out of business.

But the professional's worst enemy is booze and women. If he could steer clear of them he would soon get enough to quit and retire. I believe I could make a million dollars in two years if I could avoid the form and the fairies. It is the old story. The ladies whose smiles seemed brightest to me were in the pay of the fly cops, and here I am ready to take a little [illegible] of from two to four years in the penitentiary at Canon City. I'll cut that down by good behavior, and when I get out you can bet a year's salary that I will avoid ash barrels and back lots, and if I catch sight of an old rusty pistol in the mud I'll shun it, burger or no burger.

Williams was arrested by Detectives Carberry and MacNeil October 22 1904. For several weeks he had kept Denver in a tumult on account of the daring exploits of the "lone highwayman." His capture was a very easy piece of work. When Carberry and MacNeil walked up to him he was just ready to leave for a country town to crack a bank safe. In a satchel were two sticks of dynamite, fuse, caps and a small bottle of nitro-glycerin as well as a murderous looking revolver, false beard and a change of clothing. Williams is locked upon as the best worker in his line the West has ever seen. He is well dressed and highly educated and has recently made a study of his work, delving into psychology and anatomy to understand his victims.

Is It Necessary for a Mistress to Give Her Servant a Character?

SOME USEFUL ADVICE TO DISTRESSED HOUSEKEEPERS.

THE servant problem, like the poor, is always with us. Whenever ladies run short of a supply of conversation if no such a thing can be imagined, they invariably turn to the everlasting question of servants.

In view of this it may be as well to put down one or two words of advice dealing with this thorny problem, and bearing particularly on the "character" which usually speeds the parting and accompanies the coming handshake.

A servant has no legal right to demand a character from the mistress she is leaving. But if a servant has been faithful in the discharge of her duties, it would be an exceedingly wrongful act on the part of a mistress to refuse to give her in return and for her services some acknowledgement of character, which she could show in applying for a fresh situation.

Sometimes, of course, a definite agreement is entered into at the beginning of service between the servant and her mistress, that at the expiration of a certain time a character shall be given, but apart from Mrs. Jones is honest in the matter she such definite arrangement, there is no compulsion whatever on the mistress to do so.

But assuming that a character is given, the mistress must make no statement which she does not believe to be true in order to induce the new mistress to engage the servant. This remark is two-edged. It may be that the mistress must not do a large thing servant falsely, but, on the other hand she must not ascribe to her qualities which she does not possess. If she does she will be liable to be sued by the mistress she has deceived.

Sometimes a servant is unsatisfactory, Mrs. Smith, the possible new mistress, writes to Mrs. Jones, the old mistress, and asks her to state what is the character for her services some acknowledgement of Sarah. Mrs. Jones knows that Sarah is a thoroughly undesirable servant, but she is rather afraid that if she puts down in writing what she really thinks of Sarah, Sarah may get hold of the letter, and possibly bring an action against her for defamation of character. But provided need have no fears, for the communication to Mrs. Smith is what is known by lawyers as a "privileged communication," and she will not be liable to be sued by Sarah unless the statement which she makes about her is not only untrue but also inspired by a malicious motive.

Let us take an instance. Mrs. Jones has constantly praised Sarah while she was in her service. She has had her what a good servant she is, and remarked to her friends what a treasure she has got. Sarah, relying on this estimate of her work, has asked for an increase in wages. This has led to trouble. The cordial relations existing between Sarah and Mrs. Jones have been broken and Sarah gives notice and applies to Mrs. Smith for a new situation. Then Mrs. Smith writes to Mrs. Jones for the character, and Mrs. Jones, anxious to revenge herself on Sarah for the trouble to which she has been put in finding a new servant, writes to say that Sarah is lazy and incompetent. In this instance Sarah would have the right of action against Mrs. Jones, because she had said what was not true, and had been actuated by a distinctly malicious motive in saying so.

Let us take another instance in which a lady is sometimes faced by the fear of a law action in connection with servants. Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Brown are next door neighbors. Mrs. Robinson is aware that Jane, who is Mrs. Brown's house parlormaid, is largely in Mrs. Brown's debt, and she has seen various articles of the dress worn by Mrs. Brown's house. Mrs. Robinson decides to write to Mrs. Brown on the subject. Mrs. Brown believes in Jane and shows her the letter, and Jane brings an action against Mrs. Robinson for defamation of character.

The whole question depends on whether the words were written with the honest intention of giving Mrs. Brown information of what was going on in her home, or whether the letter was prompted by an idle, gossiping and malicious spirit. If, therefore, Mrs. Robinson is simply trying to serve her neighbor in a kindly way as she would wish to be served herself, she is perfectly safe in giving information.

Cases have been known in which servants, unable to obtain characters from their late mistresses, have supplied the deficiency by writing a character for themselves, from an old readers from open to criminal prosecution. It was felt in England about the end of the eighteenth century to be quite correct, in the year 1787, that masterers should be protected from such fraude. Therefore a fine of $100 or in default of payment, imprisonment with hard labor for anything from one month to a year, was imposed on any servant who acted in such a dishonest manner. The act comprehends other dishonest acts by servants. Sometimes a servant who has been in a situation, and who has been dismissed without a character, is naturally anxious to hide the fact. She is unable to forge a character, and she thinks that the simplest thing to do would be to say that she has never been in service before. But the law does not allow a dishonest servant to hide her past in this way, and the same penalty as in the case of forgery is exacted.

The legislators felt that in spite of this, enactment it would still be very easy for servants to continue their career of deceit. The ordinary householder is far too lazy to prosecute a dishonest servant. He packs her box, sees her baggage, but the idea of wasting a day at the police court over her, in a rule, speedily dismissed. Be the servitors ever so framed this is not decided that they must make it more stringent still to bring these erring domestics to justice. You will probably be fined a penalty is $100. Half that sum is taken by the authorities and the other half is presented to the person who gives the information that leads to the conviction.

Deaf People Now Hear Whispers

Listening Machines Invented by a Kentuckian.

Invisible, When Worn, but Act Like Eye-Glasses.

Ever see a pair of Listening Machines? They make the Deaf hear distinctly

They are so soft in the ears one can't tell they are wearing them.

And, no one else can tell either, because they are out of sight when worn. Wilson's Ear Drums are to wear hearing what spectacles are to weak sight.

These little telephones make it so easy for a deaf person to hear sounds of a sparkling ... quality that it really is fine. ... the longer one wears them the better he hears. ... grows, because they rest ... and stimulate ... the ear nerves. To rest a weak ear from strain is like resting a strained wrist from work.

Wilson's Ear Drums rest the Ear Nerves by making it unnecessary for it to have to understand without trying and straining. They make deaf people cheerful and comfortable. They so much people can talk with them, for they ... in a manner that is almost back to ... They can hear without straining. ... a voice and ... such a queer ... look on the face of a deaf person.

Wilson's Ear Drums make all the sound stir be hard on the center ... the hard ear drum, instead of spreading it weakly all over its surface. It thus makes the center of the human ear drum vibrate ten times as much as if the same sound struck the whole drum head. It is the vibration of the ear drum that carries sound to the hear ing Nerves. When we make the drum vibrate ten times as much we make the sound ten times as loud and ten times as easy to understand.

This is why people who had not in years heard a clock strike can now hear that same clock tick anywhere in the room, while wearing Wilson's Ear Drums.

Deafness, from any cause, ear-ache, buzzing noises in the head, ... ear and head colds, broken ear drums, and other ear troubles, are relieved and cured over the Ear Drums. Lots of ... the cases, by the use of these comfortable little ear receivers and sound ... machines.

His Mental Superiority---and How It Collapsed.

AN UP-TO-DATE COMEDY

IN ONE ACT.

"I have been having a sort of a row with mamma again."

ELSA (who is one of those pretty little fools of creatures with a round eyed, innocent expression, but who is as sharp as thin ice after the frost) CHAN JACK (discovering at a glance the situation).

CHAN JACK (stern ly)—You ought to be ashamed of yourself, as usual, my dear cousin. And you won't be, also as usual.

ELSA I happen to think (with infinite more dignity than she possesses) that in this case mamma was quite unjustified. Of course, you take her side; and, of course, you think you are in the right.

C. J.—Quite so. Well, sob out your sad story. What is the entanglement—who is the usual? No; on second thoughts, don't tell me. As I observed to me at bridge last night, I don't like your weak hearted declarations.

ELSA So you think you're always in the right, do you? (with bitter triumph). You begin by being all to the wrong anyhow. There is no man in the question. In fact, I have come to think now that I shall never marry

C. J.—There I am entirely with you.

ELSA—Frankly, I don't know a man who is worthy of me

C. J.—I would answer point to that I don't know a man who deserves you, though I know many men who are far from perfect. Well, if it was not a sin, what was the subject of your trouble?

ELSA— It was dress boxes.

C. J.—What on earth do you mean?

ELSA (reflectively)—I wonder if there is anything about which you know anything? Dress boxes are, as he name implies, boxes which hold dresses. The box in which your dress is sent home is a dress box. Do you think you can understand that?

C. J.—Yes, my child. What I cannot understand is how you or any other same person can manage to have any kind of dispute with a mother or with anybody else about a rotten dress box.

ELSA—Dress boxes are not rotten—I hate that word. I hate almost all the words you use.

C. J. (looking at her with a crushed expression)—That limits me

ELSA (with decision)—Dress boxes are very good boxes—very strongly and neatly made of cardboard and frightfully useful. You never know when you may want one.

C. J.—I didn't know that regret necessity was hanging over me. But I'll take your word for it. Proceed.

ELSA—You have often called me careless and extravagant, and so has mamma. You are always in the right, aren't you? As it happens, this proves whether you are or not. I always keep my dress boxes, and I always have done since I came to years of discretion.

"Don't be a silly fool. I give boxes, and I always have done since I came to years of discretion."

Those bills of home count to be thrown away, as your advice will be."

C. J.—Years of discretion! (His lone limpites doubt.)

ELSA (crisply)—You are not writing for a one cent paper just now. Try to be quiet and literal. I filled up the box room with dress boxes and I had a lot more in the spare room wardrobe. In fact, I had them pretty well everywhere.—There were 242 of them altogether. They were all good boxes that might have been used again, last week I was Saturday to-Mondaying with Mrs. Hampton (the boy rather believes he is in love with me, but I don't think he is real ly). While I was away mamma got an awful fit of energy and went about the house saying she wouldn't have anything any longer. Among other things, she said she would get her own collection of dress boxes. Those were the very words she used to my maid, and I don't think it was right But what I really complain of is that she has had them all turned out, every one of them. I don't know where they are, and mamma says she doesn't know either; but she is thankful to say they are not in her house any more. It means the work of years undone. Suppose I wanted a dress box to-morrow? (Her voice is full of pathos)

C. J.—To start with, you will not want a dress box to-morrow, and you know it well Secondly, if you did, you would telephone to your dressmaker to send you one, and all would and happily. Your mother was right.

ELSA—It's so easy to say that. Perhaps you will tell me why, if you can.

C. J. (maddeningly didactic)—Certainly Dress boxes come in the category of things which to mean, weak, excluding minds seem to be too good to be thrown away I should like to work out the cubic space occupied by the lost 242 and calculate for you what rent per annum your mother was paying to accommodate the rubbish. You must remember that dress boxes are not like the 1900 port

ELSA (admiringly)—Really? What a lot of things you do notice. I've never tasted a dress box myself.

C. J.—Do not be silly, Elsa. I give you words of wisdom. The 1900 port improves with keeping and increases in value. It helps to pay its rent, the dress box, as you know, if you would not palter with your conscience, distinctly deteriorates in keeping. It gets dustier and dustier. The corner which gets broken—there is always one—gets broken worse By people with clear, practical, sensible minds dress boxes are invariably thrown away. It is a sign of mental inferiority to keep that which is worthless. And leave that box alone, please.

ELSA (opening a brass box on Corsair Jack's writing table and finding it full of bits of string) Why do you keep all these?

C. J.—I sometimes want string.

ELSA—You've got a whole ball of it in a special case there. Don't you know that it is a sign of mental inferiority to keep things that are worthless? Those bits of string ought to be thrown away, as your advice will be. And, I say, I told mamma you would take me to lunch.

(He rises weakly and follows her from the room.)

A RIDE ON A COMET—

HERE'S THE NEW AMUSEMENT "THRILLER" FOR NEXT SUMMER'S POPULAR RESORTS.

THERE seems to be no limit to the public craving for new and thrilling sensations, gained through apparent defiance of the laws of nature—and inventors of means to accomplish these results appear able to keep well up with the demand. Formerly people were satisfied to see somebody else shoot through the atmosphere in all sorts of grotesque fashions, but latterly they insist on doing it themselves.

Since Captain Boysen established his "shoot the chutes," an amusement device which after a dozen years shows no diminution of popularity, no summer season has passed by without witnessing some new opportunity for hair-raising experiences in the name of fun. The old roller-coaster has developed into the complimented "scenic railway" which invites the passenger to dash down breathless inclines into dizzying depths, up mountain sides and through tunnels. If a song should slip one in unawares—but he doesn't seem to mind.

By hundreds of thousands all sorts of people have submitted to be whirled over "Flip-Flap Wheels" and balanced on gigantic seesaws. With no sort of respect for their wearing apparel they have slid down "Bobbing Brooks" and bumped over the humanhole of "Chilkoot Passes." Even the top flurry appearances of "Loop-the-Loops" have not satiated their passion for having extraordinary liberties taken with their help-less bodies. And now comes promise of an entirely novel thriller for the coming "silly season."

To be a passenger aboard a mechanical comet in its flight through space seems to thrillingly impossible than to receive [illegible] on Mars, yet it may be done [illegible] in a big New York loft, ready to fly with whomsoever dares at the bidding of their master. All two impressive spheres, the mechanical comets.

A combination of mechanical science and brain motive has brought them into existence, and bound them ever to short but spherical flights of swooping ascent and descent with human riders. Through time and space, through the cloud laden air, through forked lightning and rumbling thunder, they may safely go by the power of the inventor. In other and more prosaic terms with the rolling to earth of these orbs has arrived probably the most thrilling and dashing escapade in the line of out-of-door amusement devices that this amusement-loving world has yet seen.

About a year ago, during a visit to his chair factory, at Poughkeepsie, where the well-known Patten couch chair is made, Herbert H. Patten, of New York, strolled one Sunday afternoon to the top of College Hill, overlooking the beautiful panorama of river and town. As he looked down the grassy slope the idea occurred to him.

The structure or plant of the comets comprises a centre or attention runway about twelve feet in width and the length of the course may be a thousand or more feet. The track at its starting point is elevated fifty feet above the ground and is varied by curves, grades of moderately steep descent, darkened sections and other devices to render the ride more exciting, among them an electrical storm through which the balls will pass, creating the illusion of having left the track and flying through space. The comets are raised to the elevated starting point by means of cars running up an incline, the door in the side of the sphere is opened at the station platform on a level with it, the passengers step in and away flies the comet over the track, its bright colored ribs turning in bewildering revolutions around, over, above and below the passengers, who sit mystified and breathless by the exciting suggestion of danger, yet as sure of their equilibrium and safety as though in their own fireside chairs at home. The sensation as the bowl dips and slides a little one side and then settles into its perfectly level position in sharp contrast to the whirling movement of the ball is an indescribably exhilarating one.

Showing Down the Incline with Its 14 Passengers in a Bowl Kept Horizontal on Ball Bearings

Women with shrill voices, men with basso will all join in the chorus of one grand yell, while sweethearts will have plenty of excuse to hang on to each other; of course, a most thrilling experience, though perfectly safe and practical. The names of the various comets will correspond to planets of the solar system—the Earth, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn, and they will be painted in appropriate colors—Venus in gold, Mars in red, etc. The cost of each comet complete will be about $1,000.

A proposal has been made to place the comets at Coney Island this Summer. The spectacular effect of the device is remarkable, either by day or by night, when the comets will be illuminated by the weird rays of a strong searchlight. At the beginning of the course will be built a pavilion or arena for the accommodation of spectators; this is known as the loop or horseshoe, which begins and terminates the track.

The balls will not travel at a higher rate of speed than fifteen miles an hour, but the oscillation reached at various grades and curves will convince the aerial traveller that he is moving much faster. One part of the course will be arranged so that the comets will be racing side by side, which will lend to the exhilaration and excitement of the onlooker as well as the participant. The whir and whiz of each comet as it nears its fellow-comets and dreams and dreams sweeps around curves plunges into the midnight sky through the lighting of an electrical storm effect then bathed in the glaring rays of a searchlight at night or the sun light by day will give a unique and hair-raising sort of experience to the passengers while the spectator will receive a almost equal amount of pleasure. At night especially the fantastic effect of these golden and many colored comets should be particularly weird as they race around the "solar system," with its spectacular light effects.

Up to the present the inventors and managers of this class of amusement devices have appeared to appreciate the necessity of avoiding any chance of breakdowns of beforehand and abundantly. Even when one's dignity is touched, all accidents probably fatal and the prompt suppression of that particular sport. The scattered broadcast through the firmament of the "Mechanical Comet" doubtless understands how inconvenient it would be for a bowlful of his passengers to be high speed.

All bearings furnish an anti-friction means consisting of a strong searchlight. At the bottom of the bowl, permitting the latter to constantly maintain its own equilibrium with but slight oscillation. Of course, this oscillation is largely determined by the grade over which the ball may be travelling.

This bowl, in which the fourteen passengers are seated upon a circular upholstered seat facing the centre, is of hard maple and steel. It is balanced in the air and above it and furnishing the [illegible] corresponding half is a steel wire [illegible] provided with doors, enclosing the passengers and making them perfectly secure, but at the same time allowing them free and unobstructed view of the surrounding [illegible]

How Lovers Can Make Up Their Quarrels

BY AN OLD WISEACRE IN THE ART OF LOVE.

WHEN lovers quarrel, as lovers have often been wont to do since the beginning, and will doubtless continue to do until the end of time, it is not always easy to decide where the first step towards reconciliation. Clearly, in common equity, the offender ought to acknowledge his or her transgression and ask to be pardoned and forgiven for love's sweet sake. But it often happens that [illegible] that the offender is [illegible] and [illegible] has been [illegible] and [illegible] and unwilling to be angry or even hurt [illegible] with a stranger. Neither man nor woman [illegible] with heart enough to feel in love is likely to give intentional affront or pain to one whom he or she holds dear; in fact when [illegible] is apt to intimate a change of heart and a desire to pick a quarrel, which she [illegible] is dreading to engage in.

In the first case, it cannot be reiterated too often that lovers in earnest must be unwearying with each other—tender and above all not "touchy." Love is sensitive in a proportion to its depth and breadth, and hearts are tender warm in [illegible] are even brittle, though the [illegible] are [illegible]

Only when one treads upon a heart, it seems the most one can do by way of atonement [illegible] wise for the sufferer "to suffer and be still." Sacred hurts are those which rankle most and are most dangerous. The wounds which seek the surgeon to be medicined and bandaged [illegible] pain of the [illegible] place is "kissed to make it well," and lovers are but children of a larger growth.

"In lovers' quarrels the party which loves most [illegible] knowledge the greater fault." So said Sir Walter Scott, who read human hearts as few men have done. Neither is there such sweetness in making up a lovers' quarrel as to compensate for the sting. It is like robbing a bumble bee's nest for the sake of a drop of honey. [illegible] who really and truly love each other with the love which "seeketh not her own" rarely quarrel, for the simple reason that they are slow to believe the beloved can be at fault. "Charity (love) suffereth long, and is kind; is not easily provoked." It forgives, not once, nor seven times, but seventy times seven. It will not admit, so long as doubt is possible, that any offence has been meant, and it excuses beforehand and abundantly.

Even when one's dignity is touched, all is more when one's self love is wounded, it is often wise not to see the affront; it takes two to make a quarrel. When this cannot be done, one can at least appreciate gently, imputing neither blame nor malice to the beloved transgressor. "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger."

In most cases when the "little rift within the lute" threatens it is the man who can best mend it. It is his place to woo and [illegible] to hold them when he has won. There is nothing which women love so well as to be beloved, and a woman forgiving fully to it to cause a lover in order to test the strength of his affection. [illegible] women have a way of waiting around an apology and considering it made, at which vagary men are wise to be unusual rather than indignant. When [illegible] tries to pacify herself to her own [illegible] leave, at least, and perhaps ends by [illegible] herself in the right, when if she were [illegible] made to understand that she has [illegible] on a loving heart unawares she would be not only willing but anxious to atone. Women are usually willing to be forgiven, but they cannot bear to be blamed, and resent judgment even when guilty.

When the man is the transgressor a woman should take counsel of her head as well as of her heart, and, while she may be ready to forgive, she must not be too eager to do so. She may shut her eyes to many things, but when a slight is openly wilful and premeditated she must resent it for her own sake.

However, women need to bear in mind that the masculine point of view as to many things is certainly different from the feminine. Love affairs are chief among these and men see them often in an altogether different light from that which obtains upon them for women. Men will do and say things which hurt women cruelly, and yet have not the least idea of giving pain. Probably they are persecuted and injured when they discover that they have been taken amiss. For one thing, a man can never understand why his jokes, however clumsy, should not amuse the objects thereof, and when a woman fails to think them funny he declares that she has no sense of humor. Especially is this apt to be the case when his attempts at facetiousness are as abortive as those of a cow might be which should try to amuse a child by standing upon its hind legs. So, when a man who is in love with a woman perceives the danger signal shoot, and knows not why, his best policy is to ask an explanation, in all humility, and commune forthwith accordingly.

SUNDAY AMERICAN-JOURNAL EXAMINER PATTERNS

THE striking feature of the new negligees, dressing sacks and even blouses for the Spring of 1905 is their picturesqueness. There are to be quaint tucks, furbelows, flowing sleeves, prettily shaped little collars and deep cape collars—all very charming and picturesque and fashionable as well.

Designs for two of the newest of the new Spring fashions for negligees and blouses are illustrated on this page. They have been prepared expressly for the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner pattern service. The paper patterns for making the garments are to be had by filling out in 5 cents ranging from 32 to 42 inches bust measure for the blouse and 32 to 44 inches for the negligee or dressing sack.

The price of these patterns, with full directions showing how to make the [illegible] 5 cents each, is paid [illegible] on the coupon [illegible] Pattern Bureau, No. 141 [illegible] name and address and size of [illegible] and mail with [illegible] or stamps to Fashion Pattern Bureau, P. BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1905.

RULE BY CORRUPT BOSSES AND VICIOUS CORPORATIONS

THE AMERICAN PROBLEM IS TO SECURE COMMON HONESTY IN OFFICE BY CONTROL AND PUNISHMENT OF THE CRIMINAL PLUTOCRACY THAT THRIVES ON OFFICIAL CORRUPTION

HOW long will the people of the United States tolerate a political and plutocratic conspiracy that makes of popular government a farce?

How long are corrupt corporations engaged in politics for plunder to purchase and use all grades of public officials—members of Congress, State legislators, city councillors, judges on the bench?

Consider for a moment the following items of regular "ordinary news of the day," taken from one single daily newspaper:

FIRST, the Illinois Legislature is compelled to appoint a committee to investigate the charge made by one of its members—that "the Illinois Legislature is a great public auction, where special privileges are sold to the highest corporation bidders."

SECOND, the California Legislature, having investigated some of its own Senators CHARGED WITH BRIBERY, formally declares that Joseph S. Jordan, alleged agent of these Senators, secured one thousand, six hundred and fifty dollars to influence their votes.

THIRD, Alderman Charles S. Havenor, of Milwaukee, is adjudged guilty of having accepted a bribe in connection with a special privilege ordinance.

FOURTH, the Federal Grand Jury of Portland, Oregon, INDICTED UNITED STATES SENATOR JOHN H. MITCHELL FOR BRIBERY on six counts in connection with land frauds.

FIFTH, the Mayor and Comptroller of New York City are under injunction to prevent their giving away the people's money to the Gas Trust under a secret contract, and committees of the Merchants' Association and of the Municipal Ownership League demand that the Legislature investigate municipal bribery and corruption in New York city from top to bottom.

SIXTH, Coroner Moses Jackson, of New York, is found guilty of "demanding a bribe in his official position."

SEVENTH, Judge Swayne of the United States Court is impeached before the bar of the United States Senate for high misdemeanors. This judge of the United States Court IS IMPEACHED and accused of accepting money that was not rightfully his; of maliciously misusing his power of imprisonment; of having accepted for his own use the private car of a railroad corporation for which he had been appointed receiver, and of presiding as judge over trials in which he was personally interested.

This news of corruption is no exceptional day's news. It does not even cover all the news of that ONE day in the field of corporation bribery.

Can any American escape anxious uncertainty as to the future of this Republic, in the face of an official corruption that reaches from the Bench of the United States to the policeman on the corner?

Can any man contemplate without anxiety and shame for his country this system of dishonesty, of organized corporation corruption that rots the entire official administration and nullifies absolutely the power of the citizen's ballot?

It is no new road that we are travelling; the republic of Rome went over it long before us.

Already we have in this country an oligarchy of money substituted for republican government.

Is not the country ruled politically by a few corrupt bosses, representing vicious and oppressive corporations? Are we not establishing an autocracy as ruthless and rotten as that of Russia?

What power have the people to check the schemes of predatory wealth for further plunder?

One-half of the individual Legislators can be justly be assailed as the Illinois Legislature has been assailed.

One-half of the individual Legislatures can be charged with corruption as were the Senators of the California Legislature. And practically all of the so-called "legislative agents" and lobbyists can and should be held for felony as was the agent of the California Senators.

One-half at least of the aldermen in our great cities, and the public servants of our municipalities generally, are as guilty of bribery, betrayal of public trust, treachery to their constituents and their country as the wretch who has been convicted in Milwaukee.

Senator Mitchell is the second UNITED STATES SENATOR within a year to be indicted for a penitentiary offence. All Americans recognize with shame and discouragement the fact that other public men, as high in national power, could and should be indicted for the bribery or corrupt influences which place them in office, and for the fraud and criminal offences they have officially been guilty of in serving the dishonest corporation that made them.

In many American cities, as in New York city, the officials are the chosen tools of corrupt corporations, elected with corporation money.

In many other American cities, as in New York, these criminal corporations regularly invest a few hundred thousand dollars in politics, buying the privilege of stealing from the public without check.

In many American cities, as in New York city, office holders pay their political debts with the people's money and with the people's franchises.

Judge Swayne's impeachment before the bar of the Senate suggests our most serious national danger—corruption of the administration of justice to make more effective the legislative corruption that controls the making of laws.

The corrupt corporations that exercise the real power of taxation and of confiscation in this country are interested in every department of political activity; therefore, they buy and control every department.

The corporation engaged in politics for plunder buys the boss, buys the nominations on both tickets making both safe—buys, so far as it can buy, the election of the most subservient candidate, then buys the laws, the franchises and the official appointments it wants, from those that it has bought into office.

ALL of these public servants are useful to the corporations in their business. All are necessary in the business of impoverishing the people, corrupting public morals, nullifying the law and destroying the power of the State.

In this country fortunes of hundreds of millions stand as mighty monuments to corruption, injustice, fraud and actual crime, while in the city of New York alone seventy thousand public school children go hungry every day to school.

It has often been said that in time the people must own the national necessities, own the public service corporations, or permit these corporations to own the people.

It has often been said that in time the Government must control the criminal Trusts or the criminal Trusts would control the Government.

There is no longer occasion to talk of "a time to come." The time is with us.

Already the criminal Trusts control the Government very largely. The corrupt corporations hold the people in their power, and limit them in the exercise of their rights and liberties.

Does the citizen who reads this imagine that HE has any voice in nominations, any real influence in elections, in determining the laws under which he lives, in controlling his representatives in office after election?

How can the average voter be otherwise than a dummy, when in voting his choice is limited to two candidates, both owned by the Trusts? And how can the individual voter expect that the man in office will take orders from the public when the official knows that he gets his office, his official salary, AS WELL AS HIS BRIBE MONEY from the corporation that selects him to do its work.

What are the American people going to do about their national situation? Fortunately, IT IS NOT A CORRUPT PEOPLE, and it is not a cowardly people.

Thanks to the nationally organized bribery there are many dishonest people in the nation. But there are not eighty millions of them.

What do the eighty millions propose to do about the tendencies of a government which is no longer republican except in name?

Will they abandon the American idea of independence, equality and opportunity for all? Will they abandon Jefferson's principle, the greatest good for the greatest number, substituting an autocracy with unnatural wealth, unlimited power FOR THE FEW, and patient dependence for the mass of the people?

It is time for the individual American to begin to think for himself and to associate himself politically and socially with those who think as he does, irrespective of partisanship.

There is no question of party politics involved, the Democrats are as bad as the Republicans. The national problem must be dealt with, not on a basis of partisanship, but of patriotism. It must be solved by honest, independent American citizens, determined to perpetuate the Republic, determined to restore conditions that made this nation great and made the people prosperous and happy.

The MONKEY WITH the NUTS IN HIS CHEEK AND the WRONG KIND OF A STUDENT

THERE was a time in the world's history when men were interested in books as they are now.

During the great revival of learning that followed the Middle Age darkness there was an almost insane interest in knowledge in the old rediscovered writings of the great men. But this feeling for books was confined to a few, the scholars gathered in scattered universities, the monks in convents.

To-day the reading of books is the occupation, not of a few thousands, but of TENS OF MILLIONS in this country alone.

All [illegible] reading. It was said in [illegible] and caused [illegible] twenty-five years ago. It is perhaps [illegible] to say that the up-to-date books [illegible] books and books printed [illegible] about [illegible] out-number [illegible] [illegible] and books printed [illegible] short [illegible]

Who seeks Salvation must first be Kind

by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Pointing up to the silent skies,
The glittering steeples of churches rise:
And tongues of silver in words of chimes
Proclaim the era of Christian times.

From lofty pulpit to cushioned pew
(To torpid many and listening few)
The moral precept and orthodox creed
Go forth, and the sinner is urged to heed.

With serious faces and pleading air
Millions of worshippers kneel in prayer.
They pray for virtues, they pray for pelf:
They pray for the heathen, they pray for self;

They pray for the sorrowing, sick and sad;
They pray for the tempted, they pray for the bad;
They pray for the ending of crime and sin:
But never a prayer for our poor dumb kin;

Never a sermon from pious lip
Of rich men's check rein and driver's whip;
Never a protest or pleading word
For the tortured creatures of flock and herd.

Dimes and dollars are freely given
To coax the pagan to Christian heaven,
Yet the crime of cruelty walks abroad
Through the opulent land of a Christian God—

The God whose sympathy reached to all,
Who noted even the sparrow's fall.
Preach, O pastor, and pray, O priest;
Send your message to West and East:

Be voice for the voiceless and speech for the dumb,
Till the Spirit of Love to the earth shall come.
Carve this motto in each young mind:
Who seeks salvation must first be kind.

Popular Stars, in Plays New to City, and Bank Officers' Show Make Notable Week.

THERE will be all kinds of attractions at the Boston theatres [illegible] week, beginning with "Driven from Home," at the Grand. [illegible] at the Boston, as will [illegible] at "The Shepherd King," at the Majestic; Ethel Barrymore, in "Sunday," at the Hollis, and "The Burgomaster," at the Globe. "Held by the Enemy" will be revived at the Castle Square, and "The Great Train Robbery" will be the attraction at the Bowdoin.

Strong bills are promised at the vaudeville houses. Charles J. Ross and Mabel Fenton will be the stars of the Keith show, and Elsie Janis will head the programme at Music Hall.

ATTRACTIVE LIST OFFERED FOR BOSTON THEATREGOERS

Following are details of all the attractions at the local playhouses for the coming week:

Colonial Theatre.

William Faversham comes to the Colonial to-morrow night, presenting a Pinero play, "Letty," in which he is credited with having scored a great success. Hilda [illegible] is supported by a [illegible] company of [illegible]

[illegible] Letty [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] by [illegible] Lady [illegible] and [illegible] She becomes [illegible] Cecil Letchmere, [illegible] married and is supported from [illegible] Letty's employer wants to wed her, but she prefers taking his obvious proposal. Wiley, however, who knows [illegible] Letty [illegible] Letchmere [illegible] garet [illegible] but she [illegible] of his friends his bad manners are too much for her and she goes to Letchmere's flat prepared to accept him in the way he has offered himself. In Letchmere's room a circumstance saves her. Letchmere has [illegible] from a dispatch that his [illegible] he was [illegible] and [illegible] away with a lover, and [illegible] at the news awakes [illegible] memory of her own position. [illegible] years and a half [illegible] married a little photographer [illegible] happy. Letchmere, [illegible] of consumption, comes to the [illegible] Letty tells him her present [illegible] is simply the result of the lesson taught her by her narrow escape from his clutches.

Park Theatre.

Miss Annie Russell will make her re appearance at the Park, Monday evening, in "Brother Jacques." It is said to be one of the most delightful and most interesting of all the pieces in which Miss Russell has recently been seen, and is said to be her even better opportunities for the display of her talents than any of her [illegible] with Spanish American [illegible] Revolutionists in the liveliest sort of fashion. It provides opportunities for plenty of good comedy, and at the performance Thursday the clever amateurs to whom the fun-making is intrusted gave a splendid account of themselves. The chorus work in the [illegible] was [illegible] and the bits of [illegible] and Pierrots [illegible] pictorially. The production is a very fine one. The scenic effects have seldom been equalled in a musical show, and the costumes are beautiful in design and coloring.

Keith's Theatre.

One of the most promising shows of the season is announced at Keith's Theatre for the coming week. There is plenty of variety in the offering, and several of the numbers are of the "star" order. Charles J. Ross and Mabel Fenton, the original [illegible] in vaudeville, will be the [illegible] bill will be the equestrienne performance of Mlle. Bralda, the horsewoman who set [illegible] and Paris agog with her bareback [illegible] riding in the London Hippodrome and the [illegible] family of acrobats and [illegible] who are new to the Howard, and Alf Grant [illegible] comedian and mimic. [illegible] and Lliner are scheduled to do some remarkable work on the [illegible] bars, and Scamp and Dillon [illegible] will present a new sketch entitled "The Janitor." Among the others who will appear are Lefler and Woodford, rapid fire conversationalists; the Brummer quartette, [illegible] singers and dancers; Toledo and Price, [illegible] and Dan [illegible] Clarence and Thompson in a comedy [illegible], Spaldon and Hyson, comedians, the [illegible] in an Irish comedy, A Wounded Idea, in a novel combination [illegible] and [illegible] act, and Cross and Ross, black face singers and dancers. Then there will be the moving pictures and the burlesquers in a skit entitled "[illegible]."

Tremont Theatre.

The Tremont Theatre the coming week will be given over to the Bank Officers' Association, who will present their new musical comedy satire, entitled "The Filibuster." This piece was given a sort of [illegible] combination of dress rehearsal and trial performance on Thursday, and scored an immediate success. It is the general opinion that it is as good as anything that the bank officers have done in most respects and better in many. The book and lyrics were written by James Francis, and the music by William Lorraine. The music is very bright and catchy, and has a lilt and go that can hardly fail to make it popular. The story takes the people of the play from California to an imaginary South American city, and back again, and mixes up a good [illegible] with Spanish American [illegible] and [illegible] sort of fashion. It provides opportunities for plenty of good comedy, and at the performance Thursday the clever amateurs to whom the fun-making is intrusted gave a splendid account of themselves. The chorus work in the [illegible] was [illegible] and the bits of [illegible] and Pierrots [illegible] pictorially. The production is a very fine one. The scenic effects have seldom been equalled in a musical show, and the costumes are beautiful in design and coloring.

Music Hall.

Boston Music Hall has a splendid bill for next week's entertainment. Elsie Janis will be a leading feature. She has developed her natural talents for imitative [illegible] and she bills [illegible] as Cissy Loftus [illegible] features will be "The Plumber," a comedy sketch, presented by Will H. Sloan and a strong company, and several operatic excerpts by the Metropolitan Operatic Quartette. The former numbers among its presenters, Miss Rose La Hiatte, best known here from her connection with "The Runaway Girl." The operatic company gives selections from "Faust," "La Traviata" and "Il Trovatore," and, headed by M. Albert Guille, has made a name for itself as a melodic organization. A dashing feature of the bill will be the equestrienne performance of Mlle. Bralda, the horsewoman who set [illegible] and Paris agog with her bareback [illegible] riding in the London Hippodrome and the title burlesque. The excellence of the [illegible] cast and the perfect fitting of players to parts are features commented upon by all who enjoy the performance. As a matter of fact, four such bits of such magnitude have been made in the life of the play that four new stars will probably emerge from it in the near future.

Hollis Street Theatre.

There are few plays in which the scenes are more strongly contrasted than in "Sunday," in which Ethel Barrymore has made a [illegible] hit at the Hollis Street [illegible] Nothing more diverse could be pictured than the home of the four rough and big-hearted Western miners and the terrace of [illegible] private estate in the [illegible] Sunday [illegible] and the [illegible] Miss Barrymore [illegible] crowded houses have applauded her during the past week for her dramatic portrayal of the heroine and have laughed with her in the lighter scenes. Such is the popular success of "Sunday" there is no doubt that it could run for many weeks. There will be but one matinee of "Sunday" at the Hollis Street this week, and that will be on Saturday.

Majestic Theatre.

The Shepherd [illegible] with Wright Lorgan [illegible] and one of its Boston engagement to-morrow night at the Majestic Theatre.

The seats for the balance of the Boston Theatre [illegible] are more than half gone now, and those who desire to see this drama before it leaves Boston will do well to secure their seats early.

The passing of time only improves the production. The play has not only been on the boards for nearly a year, but the [illegible] setting and business is so complicated that only within a few months has the performance reached a grade of perfection satisfactory to Mr. Lorlimer. The light effects were [illegible] perfect, and to witness the scenic beauties of the play, irrespective of the drama itself, is well worth while.

Globe Theatre.

Pixley and Luders' merry musical comedy, "The Burgomaster," will begin its farewell week at the Globe Theatre to-morrow night, and incidentally, on the same evening, will celebrate its 250th performance in Boston by giving a souvenir to every lady in the audience. Starting with the fiftieth performance at the Columbia Theatre, where the piece was first, played were souvenirs were rendered, and on the occasion of the 100th, 150th and 175th performances at the Tremont Theatre the same custom was observed. The piece has been drawing packed houses at the Globe, the present company probably being the best balanced in every respect that has yet appeared in "The Burgomaster" in Boston.

Castle Square Theatre.

The management of the Castle Square Theatre has planned a revival, after six years, of Gillette's famous war play, "Held by the Enemy," for this week, and the announcement will undoubtedly gratify many of the younger patrons of the house who [illegible] with the remarkable dramatic [illegible] of the Civil War. The story of Gillette's is of one [illegible] a Confederate [illegible] and the characters introduced afford splendid opportunities for good dramatic work. In staging this production great care has been taken to realize the original designs for the scenes, and to adhere as strictly as possible to all of the details planned by Gillette for the original presentation of the play.

Howard Athenaeum.

Howard patrons will find a fast [illegible] vided for them the coming week. One of the big acts will be that of McClue, Sadana and Vera, whose sketch, "The Arrival of Kitty McCarthy," is said to be a very [illegible] the clever one. Then there will be the Athos [illegible]

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"The Great Train Robbery" is announced as the attraction for the coming week at the Bowdoin Square Theatre. It is a moving drama in five acts, and is full of thrills and exciting incidents from start to finish. Its story tells of an attempt at robbery in the far West, and of the arrest of the [illegible] men, with later a successful [illegible] and an exciting [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] and his men. Most of the favorites of the stock company will be seen in the play.

Columbia Music Hall.

The attraction at the Columbia Music Hall the coming week will be the stock or [illegible] which has been winning a reputation for itself at the [illegible] Street theatre. The [illegible] is entitled Miss Prince [illegible] and the performances [illegible] Miss Prince, which [illegible] a very amusing [illegible] The company is said to be [illegible] and the olio will include [illegible] Harry Stewart, Eddie Barry and Mary Rafferty, Hattie Wills and Irving Bell and Caulfield.

Palace Theatre.

Another excellent [illegible] is passed the [illegible] Palace [illegible] week [illegible] Grace Wood [illegible] of the [illegible] Grace Wood, Sam J. Ahern and Co. The opening burlesque is entitled [illegible] Wedding Night," and has a [illegible] Introducing The [illegible] Monroe, the German comedian; Charles Burkhardt; Carleton and Terre; Grace and Grant; Mullen and Corelli and many others.

Lyceum Theatre.

The Cracker Jack Burlesquers will for wish the show at the Lyceum Theatre the coming week, and the patrons of this house may look forward to good entertainment. "A Jolly Bachelor" and "Our Georgia Rose" are the titles of the burlesques, and the olio comprises Bello Hathaway and her banana and cocoanut [illegible] Frank Wilson, Sam J. Ahern, the Avis Double Four and Carl Anderson. The closing piece will have as a feature, Ruby Leoni, who is called the model Venus.

Austin & Stone's Museum.

"On the Pike," which is scheduled for Austin & Stone's Museum for the week beginning to-morrow, will bring together, it is asserted, one of the greatest aggregations of weird wonders ever assembled in New England. The list includes Billy Wells, the man with the iron skull; Old Zip, Barnum's famous "What Is It?"; Forrest's dog and monkey circus; Raymond and Sartoni, boxing experts; D'Alvini, the magician; Mabel Hilton, the bearded lady divinity, and Jim Irwin, the [illegible]-down man. A [illegible] of [illegible] shown is promised.

To-night's Concerts

The popular concert at the Globe Theatre to-night will be one of the kind which have made this series famous. There will be plenty of singing, comedy and feats of skill, and there will be ten first-class numbers. There will be many familiar names in the bill, which will be [illegible] to those of head-liners.

How the Stomach and Kidneys Depend on the Inside Nerves

Every day medical science becomes more simple and more certain. Simplicity and certainty go hand in hand For science has learned that while there are many causes, yet there are but few real causes of disease. That is, there are many names by which we know aches and pains and disorders. But most of these ailments spring from a common cause.

For instance, indigestion, sour stomach, heartburn, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles—diabetes, Bright's disease and other kidney disorders—heart troubles, liver troubles, bowel troubles, nervousness, restlessness, sleeplessness, irritability—all of these ailments are due to a single cause. Painful, disagreeable and dangerous, though they be, they are not separate diseases—and they are not to be treated as such. They are merely outward signs of inward trouble—nerve trouble.

Understand first that we have two entirely separate nerve systems. One we walk, or talk, or act, we call into play a certain set of nerves—nerves which obey our mental commands. That is why the arm can be raised, or the mouth opened, or the eye shut, at the slightest desire that is why your fingers can delicately pick up a pin one moment, and hold a heavy hammer the next

But these are not the nerves we are to consider here

There is another set of nerves which manages and governs and actuates the heart and the stomach, the kidneys and the liver and all of the vital functions You cannot control these nerves. By no supreme effort of mind can you make your heart stop or start—nor can you even make it vary by a single beat a minute. And so with the stomach and the liver and the kidneys—the bowels—they are automatic—they do their work, at a certain set speed whether you are awake or asleep—whether you want them to or not.

It is on these inside nerves that life and health depends. So long as these nerves perform their proper duties we are well and strong. When they fail, we know it by the inevitable symptoms—stomach, heart, liver, kidney troubles. And these troubles have no other origin, ever, than in these same nerves. For the stomach, the heart, the liver, the kidneys, have no power of their own, no self control. They owe their very impulse to the nerves. The nerves are the masters. The organs their slaves.

These automatic nerves are sometimes called the "Sympathetic" nerves. This name is given them because of the close bond of sympathy which exists between all branches. This explains why stomach trouble often develops into heart trouble—why indigestion brings on nervousness—why diseases become complicated. It explains, too, why ordinary medical treatments are wrong—why medicine so frequently fails

For, despite the discoveries of science, the common remedies of the day are designed to treat the organ, not the nerve—the symptom instead of the cause.

My Free Dollar Offer

Any sick one who has not tried my remedy — Dr. Shoop's Restorative —may have a Full Dollar's Worth Free. I ask no deposit, no reference, no security. There is nothing to pay, either now or later. I will send you an order on your druggist which he will accept in full payment for a regular, standard size Dollar bottle. And he will send the bill to me.

C. I. Shoop, M. D.

Don't you, though you may not know that it is mere patchwork? That while the suffering organ is enjoying its temporary relief, the nerve that is really sick may be getting worse and worse? Does this not explain to you why relapse so frequently follows a seeming cure? Does this not account for the uncertainties of medicine?

More than thirty years ago this thought came to me:

"If life and health depend upon perfect heart action, upon proper stomach digestion, upon correct kidney filtering, why does not life itself depend upon these life governing power nerves—these inside nerves?"

I realized, too, that all ailments which result from one cause may, of course, be cured by one remedy. I resolved not to doctor the organs but to treat the one nerve system which operates them all

For those who treat only the symptoms need a different remedy for each Such treatments are only palliative; the results do not last A cure can never come in disease of the stomach, heart, liver or kidneys, until the inside nerve power is restored When that is done, Nature removes the symptoms. There is no need of doctoring the organs

My remedy—now known by Drugg sts everywhere, as Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is the result of a quarter century of endeavor along this very line It does not dose the organ or deaden the pain—but it does go at once to the nerve—the inside nerve—the power nerve—and builds it up, and strengthens it and makes it well

There is no mystery—no miracle. I can explain my treatment to you as easily as I can tell you why cold freezes water and why heat melts ice. Nor do I claim a discovery. For every detail of my treatment is based on truths so fundamental that none can deny them And every ingredient of my medicine is as old as the hills it grows on. I simply applied the truths and combined the ingredients into a remedy that is practically certain.

In more than a million homes my remedy is now known, and relied upon. Yet you may not have heard of it So I make this offer. I want a STRANGER, without every possible excuse for doubt may be removed. Send no money—make no promise—take no risk. Simply write and ask If you have never tried my remedy, I will send you an order on your druggist for a full dollar bottle—not a sample, but the regular standard bottle he keeps constantly on his shelves. The druggist will require no conditions. He will accept my order as cheerfully as though your dollar lay before him. He will send the bill to me

Will you accept this opportunity to learn at my expense absolutely how to be rid forever of all forms of nervousness—to be rid not only of the trouble, but of the very cause which produced it? Write today

For a free sample of Dr. Shoop's Restorative, a full dollar bottle, or for Dr. Shoop's New Book on Nervous Sick Women, Dr. Shoop's Book on Heart, Stomach and Kidneys, address Dr. Shoop, Box 5000, Racine, Wis. Sold by druggists everywhere. Book sent free.

Most cases are often cured by a single bottle. For sale at forty thousand drug stores.

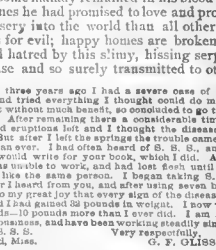
A DREAM OF HAPPINESS



It is the hope of every man to some day establish a home of his own where he can enjoy the sweet companionship of a loving wife and bright, happy children; and many times in the quiet seclusion of his bachelor quarters his imagination paints beautiful pictures of domestic happiness, and in fancy sees himself surrounded by a healthy and contented little family. A mighty host of unfortunate victims of that heinous disease, Contagious Blood Poison, are shut out from the enjoyment of matrimonial happiness. Riches, social position and honors would the unhappy lover gladly exchange for health and the assurance that no taint of this loathsome malady remained in his blood to be transmitted to posterity or blight the lives of the ones he had promised to love and protect.

Contagious Blood Poison has brought more misery into the world than all other diseases combined. There is no limit to its powers for evil; happy homes are broken up, and confidence and affection turned to distrust and hatred by this slimy, hissing serpent. So highly contagious and treacherous is this disease and so surely transmitted to others that those whose blood has once been polluted by this awful virus may well pause and consider—is it safe to marry? Oftentimes all evidences of blood poison disappear and marriage is contracted under the mistaken belief that all danger of contaminating others is past, but your dream of happiness is rudely disturbed when you behold the return of the disease in its original fury.

Whoever relies on Mercury and Potash as a cure for Contagious Blood Poison takes desperate chances, for these drugs cover up and mask the symptoms, but drive the poison deeper into the blood and system, where it feeds upon some vital organ and periodically breaks out upon the skin. We have a standing offer of $1,000 for proof that S. S. S. contains one single mineral ingredient. It is a combination of vegetable alteratives and tonics that make it beyond question the purest and safest of all blood purifiers. For many years S. S. S. has been recognized as a Specific for Contagious Blood Poison, and a perfect antidote for the virus that makes this disease so terrible and far reaching in its effects upon the human system.

About three years ago I had a severe case of Blood Poison and tried everything I thought could do me any good, but without much benefit, so concluded to go to Hot Springs. After remaining there a considerable time the sores and eruptions left and I thought the disease was cured. But after I left the springs the trouble came back worse than ever. I had often heard of S. S. S., and decided I would write for your book, which I did. At that time I was unable to work, and had lost flesh until I did not look like the same person. I began taking S. S. S. soon after I heard from you, and after using seven bottles I found to my great joy that every sign of the disease was gone, and I had gained 32 pounds in weight. I now weigh 190 pounds—10 pounds more than ever did. I am in the railroad business, and have been working steadily since beginning S. S. S.

Very respectfully,

Leland, Miss. G. F. GLISSON.

SSS

So thoroughly and completely does S. S. S. cure this disease that no recurring symptoms are ever seen, and the blood is made as pure and strong as before the taint of this fearful curse entered. It will cure you and remove all danger of transmitting to future posterity blood poison in any of its varied forms, and your dream of happiness may yet be realized.

We will gladly help through our Medical Department those who write us about their case. Our physicians have had large experience in treating Contagious Blood Poison, and you can have the benefit of their advice without charge. Self treatment book, containing valuable information about this disease, will be sent free.

AN ENCYCLOPEDIA FOR EVERY HOME

The BOSTON AMERICAN'S Great Enterprise

The Encyclopedia Habit Makes Men and Women Successful

THE BOSTON AMERICAN, famous for its many enterprises, has inaugurated another great educational campaign. Realizing the necessity for a modern, up-to-date Encyclopedia in every home, arrangements have been made to distribute several thousand complete sets of the famous New Standard Encyclopedia, in 12 massive volumes, among the readers of this paper.

It Means Much to You and Your Family

A good, modern, up-to-date Encyclopedia is the most important set of books you could possibly put into your home. It gives complete and definite knowledge on every subject—history, science, geography, politics, religion, commerce, philosophy, etc.—written in words that all can understand. An Encyclopedia is a veritable storehouse of knowledge, by the aid of which any one can acquire a liberal education. It contains in condensed and digested form the collected wisdom of all time. Even if you yourself do not feel the need of an Encyclopedia, you should not deprive the young people in your family of this great aid to education and advancement. In these times there is little chance for one who is not well informed—who does not keep abreast of the times. Education is the key to success, and the only short cut to education is an Encyclopedia.

Publisher's Prices Prohibitive

Heretofore good Encyclopedias have been put on the market at abnormally high figures, ranging from $80 to $120—prices which only the very rich could afford to pay. It is to overcome these high prices that the American has organized a great Co-operative Club, through which the readers of this paper can secure the newest and best Encyclopedia on the market at about the actual cost of manufacture and on terms that mean only a few cents a day.

Our Plan—Direct from Binder to You

In entering upon this enterprise, which is designed to be of the greatest educational importance, the American simply acts as a purchasing agent, representing both the publishers and the public. On account of our immense purchasing and distributing powers, we were able to arrange with the publishers of the New Standard Encyclopedia for an entire edition of that famous work, which will be reserved exclusively for the members of the American Encyclopedia Club.

The object of the Club is to eliminate the middleman, hence complete sets will be shipped direct from the binder to the purchaser. There will be no intermediaries. This furnishes a practical demonstration of the remarkable power of co-operation.

Newest and Best Reference Library on the Market

AFTER LOOKING OVER THE FIELD CAREFULLY FOR AN ENCYCLOPEDIA THAT WOULD MEASURE UP TO ALL REQUIREMENTS, THE NEW STANDARD WAS SELECTED, BECAUSE, IN THE JUDGMENT OF MANY EMINENT CRITICS AND SCHOLARS, IT IS THE BEST AND MOST PRACTICAL REFERENCE WORK THAT HAS YET BEEN PUBLISHED. IT IS NOT ONE OF THOSE CHEAP, TRASHY AFFAIRS, REHASHED FROM FOREIGN SOURCES, BUT A FIRST-CLASS AMERICAN ENCYCLOPEDIA, WRITTEN IN A SIMPLE, CLEAR AND READABLE STYLE.

The New Standard Encyclopedia
12 Massive Volumes

For the Home

Heretofore all Encyclopedias have been designed especially for the learned scholar or professional man, who desires technical information. The New Standard is entirely different in that respect. Its articles are not technical, dry or hard to read, and while they contain all the facts, everything is presented in such a clear, interesting manner that invite further reading. In this Encyclopedia all those dreary and weighty chapters are eliminated. It gives the facts and the facts only, in the most readable, entertaining fashion. Every member of the family will read and enjoy this kind of an Encyclopedia.

900,000 Topics

The New Standard Encyclopedia contains full and complete information on every subject of human interest. 900,000 topics are included, and yet so carefully has the work been edited, that it is all contained in 12 massive volumes. This is the most convenient form for an Encyclopedia, it will be used where larger and more technical works would be overlooked on the shelves. The 12 volumes contain over 15,000 articles, which are grouped in the various volumes in alphabetical order. There are over 8,000 pages and over 4,000 illustrations, including 150 double-page maps, colored plates, etc.

How To Get a Set

It is impossible in this limited space to describe fully the plans and purposes of the Club, and the plan of sale whereby members may have the entire library delivered to them at once, and pay for it at the rate of a few cents a day. If you are interested, write to-day for full particulars. Do not put it off until to-morrow; to-morrow may be too late. Only one edition has been contracted for, and when it has been distributed no more applications will be received. This Club was organized for your benefit. No one will be to blame but yourself if you do not get an Encyclopedia now while the opportunity is here. Tear off the coupon and mail it to us to-day. An opportunity like this may never occur again in your lifetime.

FREE To Those Who Apply Promptly

If you have no Encyclopedia at all, or if you have one that is old and unsatisfactory, mail the attached coupon, which, as you will note, is not an application for membership, but simply a request for information, and you will receive, free of charge, a beautiful booklet containing full page duogravure portraits of the Mikado of Japan and the Emperor of Russia, double page maps of Japan and Corea and the new Republic of Panama, besides many beautiful colored plates, sample pages, showing the text, etc. With the booklet we will send full particulars about the club.

This offer is made to responsible men and women. No children need apply.

This Coupon Will Bring You Full Information

MAIL THIS TO-DAY TO THE ENCYCLOPEDIA DEPARTMENT, 80-82 Summer St., Boston.

Please send me, without charge, information regarding your new Encyclopedia Club; also specimen pages of the Encyclopedia, including maps, portraits and colored engravings. H A '505

"PEACE," ADVISES TOLSTOI

In Talk to Michael Davitt

"BUT REVOLT WILL COME"

FREE LAND ALL PEOPLE ARE IN NEED OF.

Pleads for Higher Life to Remove Evils Beneath Which Country Bows.

RELIGIOUS SPIRIT IS NECESSARY, HE ASSERTS

Suffering, the Great Muscovite Declares, Comes from Each Man's Own Acts.

Michael Davitt, Irish Leader, Boston Sunday American Commissioner in Russia

Count Tolstoi, the great Muscovite patriot, a few days ago received Michael Davitt, the BOSTON AMERICAN'S special correspondent in Russia, and gave this paper an exclusive interview on the Russian massacres of the past two weeks, their cause and future effect. The noted author made this prediction.

"A Russian revolution will come, but it will be through the spread of education, intellectual and economic, and especially through the people effecting a personal revolution in their own lives by acquiring a true religious spirit. The people must have the land."

By Michael Davitt,
Special Commissioner of the Boston American in Russia.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 4.—Count Leo Tolstoi, as promised in my talk with him a few days ago, has sent me a copy of the open letter to the Russian workmen which he will spread broadcast next week. It reads in part as follows:

"I ask you workmen, first, to clearly understand exactly what you require and to give yourself no trouble in acquiring what you do not need at all. You require only one thing: a free hand upon which you can live and from which you may draw your food.

"Secondly, I advise you clearly to understand by what means you can acquire the land you need. You can do this if by force, from which God preserve you, but by determined efforts, not by one or six representatives of the Parliament, but only by a non-participation in that which you regard as evil.

"Thirdly, I advise you to consider beforehand how you will dispose of the land when it has come to you. In order to succeed remember this: you must not think that the land needs the landlords who become owners of your property.

Honor All Rights.

"You must understand that in order that the use of the land should be justly and impartially distributed among the men it is necessary to guarantee to the use of ownership to landed property, even as to such open square land. It will be recognized, land as the common possession of all men like the sunshine and air, that you will be able to distribute it justly and mutually only among all men.

"Fourthly, and this is the most important—I advise you in attaining all you require to direct your efforts not to struggle with the ruling classes by means of riots and revolutions or on solitary points, but to reconstruct your better own. People are kind; all only because they live badly.

"There is nothing more pernicious for men than the idea that the causes of the misery of the people are in those sellers, but in external conditions. If rich and knowledge mingle that they are two persons proceeds from external conditions and direct your attention only to altering these external conditions, then evil will only increase.

"If men will only study themselves and their lives in a search for the cause of the evil they suffer they will find the causes of evil will disappear instantly."

PARADOX OF AN ACTRESS' HEART IN $30,000 SUIT AGAINST HARVARD MAN

Study of Miss Charlotte Helen Bates McNally, chorus girl, and Robert L. Lee, whom she is suing for $30,000.

SHOW GIRL TWICE LOVED R. E. LEE, SHE ASSERTS

One woman's heart and its paradoxes are being laid bare in the suit of Charlotte Helen Bates McNally, chorus girl, of Boston against Robert Lee, scion of a family of promise. Hearing of the suit will be continued to-morrow in Middlesex Superior court. Last Cambridge heard a large part of the story has been brought out. To-day it is to be the turn of Harvard in 1895, of her love for him, of the failure of this love, and then of its remarkable

Miss McNally sues for $30,000. The plaintiff is secretary of the H. M. Caldwell company, book publishers, on Summer street. He has a handsome chest and ruffles, with the wife he married when for the last time he said good-by to the life across who had for a time charmed him, then passed on her hour the way. Mr Lee is a relative of the late Southern general. He graduated from Harvard in 1896. Miss McNally lives at No. 5 Templeton way, Dorchester.

Helen Bates on Stage.

Miss McNally on the stage is known as Helen Bates. Early an orphan she went on the stage, and as a chorus girl as a show girl and in minor parts she has been known in the stage since just before her meeting with Mr Lee in 1895. She is a gentle blonde, pretty. Miss was modest in manner. She as she was telling her story of the meetings with Mr Lee and kept on fanning herself.

When Miss McNally next appeared on the stage she loved a man, according to the story she told in the Lyceum, whose address she didn't give. This romance was a brief one. Then came Mr. Lee. In 1895 they became engaged, she says. At that time she had gone to New York and was appearing in burlesque at Louis Dean's. Mr Lee showed lights of his character as lover and, for a time, the wedding day was not [illegible] had postponed he gave as [illegible] objected.

Along Came Miss. McNally met the first man she had ever loved. Instantly her infatuation [illegible] Mr Lee's [illegible] occasional gave no letters from Mr. Lee [illegible] help her for [illegible] she did.

In the next year, 1900, she was playing here at the Park Theatre. In the front row she saw Mr Lee. The great [illegible] of her love for him returned and she declares he took Lee in and over several times then they entered into what she says was an arrangement to marry, but hardly an engagement.

Parted, Met Again.

She went on her way. They corresponded. The letters are in evidence. In 1901 she returned here, again with the Four Cohans, with whom she had been in 1900. They dined together. Mr. Lee asked her, she said, to renew their engagement by wasted letters, on Christmas day the next day she said she did. The wedding day was set for September 20, 1902, according to her testimony.

In New York shortly after she received a letter signed by Mr Lee, in which he stated that [illegible] engagement had been renewed and said [illegible] engagement he should not [illegible] the correspondence ceased.

Immediately after she heard that Mr Lee was to be married. He called on her but she did not consider her engagement to [illegible] was married to Miss Eustace, daughter of Alfred.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and sometimes gave us that dreaded spring and summer sulphur and molasses.

It was universally used and full as much, other, home and clerical, as now, but this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

It did work good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effect of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a dessertful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (CaCaSn Si). Many also old in drug, stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers they are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining health, vigor and health, sulphur acts directly on the liver, and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crude and nasty of ordinary sulphur were often worse than the disease and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is unquestionably the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and pimples because they act directly on the cause of the trouble.

Dr. H. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article and sold by druggists rather than by reason taken by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin diseases as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers" will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers, a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels, it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

Bank Statement Causes Selling of Stocks Show an Average Loss of Point or More on the Day's Dealings

LOCAL MARKET QUIET, COPPER AT LOW EBB

44,000 Shares of Last of Trinity Change Hands in Two Days' Trading with Closing Top Points Under Top Price

Some of the stock market pundits had made the alarming mistake of thinking that the bank statement would be bad. The reason for such a mistake is hard to understand, but it was made. The result was that the stock market was in a state of panic yesterday when the statement was published. Every one knew that the statement would show a large decrease of loans. Little cause in cash. Every person familiar with the processes of banking could tell exactly such a statement as was given out. It was a fairly good one, and yet the market ran away from it. The decrease of $7,116,625 in surplus reserve frightened the Lambs who had to sell. Prices of listed stock nearly a hundred per cent. Even the prices at which they refused the same stock were much lower.

Now the stock market would have run like that and reference to it would not be had on Saturday through the last few months at times when it is known there was no public in the market, proves it. Deposits decreased $7,151,700 and cash decreased $7,233,200. The total surplus reserve is now $19,087,900. It was $21,842,575 a year ago, and $18,345,675 two years ago. It is, therefore, normal now.

These figures do not take any account of the Government deposits, which have been proof of the great number of new concerns, how many interests are deposed to avail it. It has less resistance of seasonal checks, and the traders may be depended on to take credit for the fact.

Present indications are that the advance will be continued, but more aggressive than has been expected than have been seen the past few weeks.

BANK STATEMENT PROVES PUBLIC BUYING

If there was any doubt that the public being deeply the stock market it was removed yesterday when the bank statement was published. Every one knew that the statement would show a large decrease of loans. Little cause in cash. Every person familiar with the processes of banking could tell exactly such a statement as was given out. It was a fairly good one, and yet the market ran away from it. The decrease of $7,116,625 in surplus reserve frightened the Lambs who had to sell. Prices of listed stock nearly a hundred per cent. Even the prices at which they refused the same stock were much lower.

Now the stock market would have run like that and reference to it would not be had on Saturday through the last few months at times when it is known there was no public in the market, proves it. Deposits decreased $7,151,700 and cash decreased $7,233,200. The total surplus reserve is now $19,087,900. It was $21,842,575 a year ago, and $18,345,675 two years ago. It is, therefore, normal now.

These figures do not take any account of the Government deposits, which have been proof of the great number of new concerns, how many interests are deposed to avail it. It has less resistance of seasonal checks, and the traders may be depended on to take credit for the fact.

Present indications are that the advance will be continued, but more aggressive than has been expected than have been seen the past few weeks.

Danderine

GREW THIS HAIR

And we can PROVE IT.

If you want your hair to grow THICK and LONG

DANDERINE

Is the remedy you will be surprised to use. We have a standing offer to wager $1,000 that it is the only on the market to-day that will positively stop and cure Falling Hair and make

HAIR GROW

Average growth 1¼ in. per month for twenty consecutive months.

By permission we herewith reproduce photograph of Miss Sarah MacComb, a lady who has been living in Chicago all her life and who has been in the employ of the South Side Elevated Railroad Company for a number of years. Her hair before she commenced the use of Danderine was thin, lifeless and scraggy. Now it touches the floor when standing, over 5 inches in length. The growth is the result of using Danderine. Miss MacComb writes: "I have used a number of so-called Hair Tonics, but Danderine is the greatest of all. Hair and scalp troubles, formerly so annoying to me, have entirely disappeared, and I have made a new friend of every lady I have induced to use Danderine. I feel that I am under a debt of gratitude to the discoverer of Danderine, and will do the same for you if you give it a fair trial. Danderine is a delightful dressing, and I always use it on my hair and scalp. It is not sticky, and there seems to be no limit to the growth it will produce. There is no other that can be compared to it, as it is founded on new ideas altogether.

It Gave Her Hair New Life

And will do the same for you if you give it a fair trial. Danderine is a delightful dressing, and I always use it on my hair and scalp. It is not sticky, and there seems to be no limit to the growth it will produce. There is no other that can be compared to it, as it is founded on new ideas altogether.

SHE IS WILLING TO SWEAR TO IT.

By request of Miss MacComb we reproduce the following letters:

EXCELSIOR HAIR DANDERINE CO., Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—I am now on my fourth bottle regarding Danderine, and I am pleased to say that I have received the benefit that you claim it will do. I was afraid at first that it was a humbug, but after using your Danderine for twenty consecutive months I find the average growth of hair is 1¼ inches per month, or a total of twenty-five inches in twenty months. I am willing to swear to this statement before a notary public, and will be glad to have you use this letter in any manner you see fit. Yours truly, Sarah MacComb.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of March, A. D. 1904. [Seal] Notary Public.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle.

FREE To show how quickly Danderine acts on the hair I need a large sample free by return mail to those who send me their name and address on a postal card. Don't send stamps, but write your name and address plainly and send me 10 cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

GREAT FUND FOR SALARIES IN HARVARD.

Plan to Raise Endowment Sum of $2,000,000 and Thus Guarantee an Increase of Pay to Professors and Instructors

IN LINE WITH IDEA OF PRESIDENT ELIOT

Alumni Undertakes the Work and It Is Expected the Money Will be Raised by Next Commencement—Large Deficit

Following the suggestion of President Eliot in his last report, the Harvard College fund is a plan under way by which it is expected to have in hand $2,000,000 to turn over to the corporation by next commencement day to form the nucleus of the endowment fund for the professors.

Mr. Eliot has given attention to the matter for several years, but when the report was read no public announcement was made, however at the time. The second report of the president called special attention to the need of increasing the endowment fund, and at the request of Mr. Eliot a committee was appointed for the purpose of raising the $2,000,000 for the payment of the professors and [illegible] that ought to be [illegible]

REALTY PRICES FOR MONTH ARE HIGH.

February's Sales Have Set a Good Standard in Transactions of First Four Days and Average Now Is Well Up.

URBAN PROPERTY IS GREATLY IN DEMAND

Beacon Hill Is the Principal Point of Interest so Far, and a $250,000 Deal Is to Be Consummated This Week.

Should the average value of parcels comprising local realty dealings continue at the level already established, the month of February will be likely to follow January's record for January. Urban property has been greatly in demand the past few days, with Beacon Hill the principal point of interest, and it is expected that during the coming week property amounting in value to $250,000 will change ownership. No. 6 Beacon street, assessed on a valuation of $119,000, has already been purchased by J. Sumner Draper, who buys for investment. A number of other transactions involving values of all the way from $10,000 to $146,000 have been recorded.

One of the important announcements made has been that relating to the leasing of the property at the corner of Franklin and Hawley streets to the firm of Jones, McDuffee & Stratton. It is the intention of the lessees to erect a modern eight-story structure upon the site secured.

$300,000 Estate Sold.

The most important announcement yesterday was of the sale to a local real estate trust of the estate at Nos. 336 to 340 Brighton street, and owned jointly by Dr. Henry O. Marcy and Sarah E. Marcy. Although there are two parcels the sale was effected as one. The total assessed valuation is $188,000. The land measures 25,000 square feet. The price paid for the property is said to be $300,000. It is likely that the asking price has been $300,000.

Through the office of A. Shuebert Barratt & Co., General George T. Cruft has sold the estate at No. 599 Columbus avenue, consisting of a four-story, single family brick dwelling and 1,300 square feet of land, all assessed on a valuation of $13,500. The purchaser buys for investment.

The conveyance of two Beacon Hill properties is announced, one No. 130 Mount Vernon street, the other No. 55 River street. The grantee is Gertrude Beals. The assessed valuation on the Mount Vernon street property is $9,500; on the River street property the valuation is $11,000.

Samuel M. Shapleigh has taken title to the lot of land at the corner of Ivy and St. Mary's streets, formerly belonging to the Lawrence Land Company. The 6,092 square feet of land has an assessed valuation of $9,500.

Buys 12-Room House.

Edward T. Harrington & Co. have sold the house at No. 36 Glen road, a new 12-room house, and containing 10,000 square feet of land. The purchaser is Mrs. Ellen M. Jordan, who has bought for occupancy. The sale was made for the Roxbury Co-operative Bank.

E. Rosindale, Edward T. Harrington & Co. have sold for Mrs. Annie M. Brown her estate at 1 and 3 Milton terrace, fronting and Eldridge street, in the Clarendon Hill section, consisting of a ten-room house, together with 10,000 square feet of land. The property is assessed for $12,000. Terms were private.

The same brokers have sold for Clara Abbott, of Waltham, her farm in the town of Bolton, containing thirty-seven acres, better known as the Henry E. Babcock farm. Charles Quigley, of Littleton, N. H., is the purchaser. The price said was $6,750.

Charles P. Dana is the purchaser of the A. S. Wright estate, Lexington road, Melrose. The property has been in the Bryant family for 160 years. It is situated at the junction of Massachusetts avenue and the State road, and has a very long street frontage. It was sold for the Bryant brothers, Chicago.

Edward T. Harrington & Co. have sold for the Lexington Savings Bank the estate at Nos. 986-988 Broadway, Everett, consisting of a modern two-family house of thirteen rooms and 7,000 square feet of land. The property is assessed for $4,000. The purchaser is W. B. Cooley, who buys for occupancy.

Houses and Farms Change Hands.

They have also sold for Ella M. Melvin of Stow, Massachusetts, her farm, with large two-story dwelling house, two barns and other farm buildings, located on the road from Stow to Harvard. The estate is heavily timbered. William J. Taylor of Boston is the new owner.

John A. Peters of Ellsworth, Me., has sold, through this office, a piece of land containing 3,500 square feet, situated on the westerly side of Walnut street, Malden. Meyer B. Grunsenoin of Malden purchased for investment and will erect a three-family house thereon. The valuation of the lot is twenty-five cents per foot.

A lot of vacant land on the Bay State road, near Sanford street, containing an area of 3,366 square feet and taxed on a basis of $8 the foot, has been sold by John Fay to Dr. John W. Farlow.

The estate of James W. Hughes has sold to John A. Ryan the property, No. 5 Standard street, Everett, consisting of a single story brick dwelling and 1,900 square feet of land, sold on a valuation basis of $15,600.

The following transactions were yesterday recorded on the books of the Real Estate Exchange:

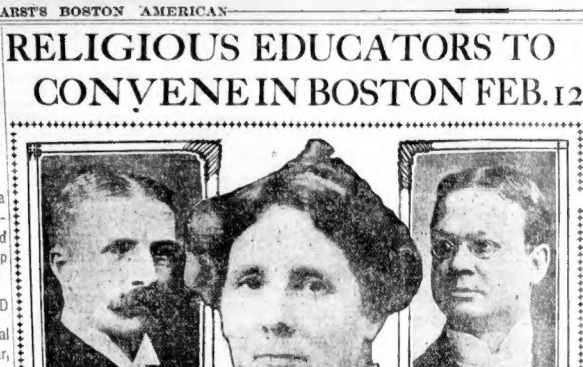
RELIGIOUS EDUCATORS TO CONVENE IN BOSTON FEB. 12



PRESIDENT FAUNCE BROWN UNIVERSITY
MISS CLARA BANCROFT BERTELEY
PRESIDENT WILLIAM R. HARPER CHICAGO UNIVERSITY
WM. DEWITT HYDE PRESIDENT BOWDOIN COLLEGE.

NATIONAL LEADERS IN THE WORK TO BE PRESENT.

Boston will have the privilege and honor next week of welcoming the Religious Education Association. Its meetings will be held from February 12 to 16 at Tremont Temple.

No religious movement of modern times has grown so auspiciously as this with its long roll of great names. Men who are well known in different departments of education along the lines of practical and religious training will participate in its meetings. It is peculiarly an intellectual convention. The best men in every Christian denomination found among its members.

It was organized in Chicago February 12, 1903, when forty colleges and university presidents with the aid of other instructors met and considered plans for religious education. In order to improve the system of Christian training, it was found indispensable that a conference of merely persons educators should come in touch with one another, compare notes, and devise plans for more efficient administration of their special duties. Its present membership is over 1,000, representing forty-eight States and Territories, six British provinces and nine foreign countries. Thirty-nine of the leading churches and denominations are represented. The last annual convention was held in Philadelphia, in March, 1904. Rev. the addresses on "The Bible in Practical Life" were then made, and those are included in the proceedings of the association.

In Charge of Plans.

Dr. Albert E. Winship, editor of the Journal of Education, is chairman of the Boston committee of arrangements, and the following representative persons are among the names of the vice-chairmen:

Borden P. Bowne, Ph. D., professor in Boston University; Samuel B. Capen, LL. D., Grafton D. Cushing, the Rev. Charles F. Dole, Albert E. Dunning, D. D.; Samuel A. Eliot, D. D.; George Gordon, Ph. D.; George Hodges, Henry C. Kinsley, D. D.; C. W. Parmenter Litt, D. D., headmaster of the Mechanic Arts High School, Boston; George L. Perin, D. D.; Francis G. Peabody, Francis A. Prescott, Ph. D.; Theodore F. Wright, Ph. D.; Augustus D. Small, head master South Boston High School, and others.

The direct aim of the association is the promotion of religious and moral education as carried on in public schools, churches and pastors, universities and colleges, the press, public sentiment, etc.

The service which it undertakes to render is to be, (1) a clearing-house for correct religious educational ideas; (2) a rallying centre for sincere seekers after the best ways for developing the religious and moral character of the young; (3) a confederation, sufficiently close, safe and sane to merit the friendship of all who desire that education become thoroughly religious and moral; (4) a nonpartisan, but trustworthy, and helpful friend of every individual, church, Sunday school, association, young people's society or other organization in any way engaged in religious education.

Its policy is broad and comprehensive. It takes the principles of education which have been tried and crystallized in the very honest seeker after truth. Its results already have been largely influential. The conferences held have awakened a deep interest everywhere. Publishing houses have had an opportunity to exchange ideas with others, and as a consequence there has grown up the popular sentiment that religion and morals should have their proper place in the education of every individual and community.

Many Prominent Speakers.

The different themes to be presented at this convention will be the aims of religious education, upon which Mr. G. Wilmar Mosier, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Chicago, Ill., will speak. Dr. Albert E. Winship will give the address of welcome. President William R. Harper of the University of Chicago will make the response.

The president's annual address, which is the feature of the convention, will be given by President Charles C. Hall D. D., Union Theological Seminary, New York.

"How can we bring the individual into conscious relation with God?" will be presented by Bishop McDowell of the Methodist church.

President H. C. King, of Oberlin College, Ohio, will treat the "Bible as an Aid to Self-Discovery."

Professor Lawrence will speak upon the topic, "The Church as a Factor in Religious Development."

Nothing will invite greater attention than the theme of "The Place of Formal Instruction in Religious and Moral Education," which will be opened by President G. Stanley Hall, of Clark University, Worcester, Mass., who will confine his address to the instruction in the home. Professor George A. Coe, Ph. D., Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., the Rev. Rudolph Peabody, D. D., of Groton, George H. Martin, of the Boston Board of Education, and President George Harris, of Amherst College, will also speak on this subject.

President H. S. Pritchett, Ph. D., of Boston, Professor N. S. Hoyt, of Andover Theological Seminary, Professors Henry S. Nash, D. D., of Cambridge, and William E. Barton, D. D., of Atlanta University, Ga., will discuss "How Can We Develop in the Individual a Social Conscience?"

President Tucker, of Dartmouth College, is one of the speakers upon the topic, "How Can We Cultivate in the Student a Sense of National and Universal Brotherhood?"

Harper to Give Address.

Many well-known educators will confer upon the matter of religious education. President Harper, of Chicago, will speak upon "What Can Universities and Colleges Do for the Religious Life of Their Students?" and President Hyde, of Bowdoin College, upon "An Experiment of Religious Instruction in a College."

Theological seminaries throughout the United States will be considered in a number of formal addresses by President W. D. Mackenzie, D. D., of Hartford Theological Seminary; President W. Walker, of Yale Divinity School, and Professor H. G. Mitchell, of Boston University.

The variety of problems confronting the modern churches and pastors will have special attention. How far may the Church go in relief, in education, and what should be the aims of the pastor in religious education, Sunday school methods and appliances, together with the Sunday school lesson, will all be severally treated by well-known clergymen.

Then the topic of general education in the public high schools, with an emphasis upon the study of English literature as a means of implanting high moral ideals, to be followed by the effectiveness of the elementary public schools, where the foundation of religion and morality should be laid.

The training of Sunday school teachers,

FOUND WIFE DEAD WITH SLEEPING BABE

Providence, R. I., Feb. 4.—When James O'Hara returned from work this afternoon to his home at No. 18 Lyon street, he found his wife dead in bed of heart disease. Beside her lay her little daughter. The child was asleep, and unaware of its mother's death.

FLOODS IN CALIFORNIA.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 4.—The heaviest rainstorm that has been known in Southern California in years is raging in this section. It is accompanied by lightning, something almost unknown in this part of the country.

WILL STUDY PLANS FOR TRAINING OF THE YOUNG.

Leading Members of the Religious Educational Association.

the importance of Christian associations and young people's societies, the power of a Christian home, and the instruction of the youth in social and civic responsibility, make up a series of valuable and timely discussions.

The religious and ethical work of libraries, the power of a religious press, the value of Summer association, the emphasis upon the practical life of religious art and music, show the diversified interests of the association and how comprehensive is the outline of its important work.

Work Among Boys.

Work among boys in the country as well as in the city will create a new interest in this convention. Never has the subject been thoroughly studied in its many details, and an unique opportunity is now afforded to agree upon some plan for more aggressive work in this direction.

Such an assembly of notable men in all departments of education will produce a profound impression upon Boston. This convention differs from all others in that it has gathered the best in the country to discuss matters which will be represented by those who have given special thought to their consideration. Its broad liberal atmosphere is pronounced. Whatever be the religious education will be made evident. The public school system will be treated by men whose opinions will give weight and influence to what they say. Much is gained every way by a clear and definite explanation of what kind of an education the future American citizen needs, and this convention will have justified its existence, if upon this topic it can consistently throw some light.

It is only an infant now, but as its years lengthen, it is destined to be the only convention which shall materially affect the whole range of a moral and religious training and inaugurate methods which will advance the best interests of American citizenship.

NO MILL TRUST IN FALL RIVER PROBABLE.

Leading Officials of the Manufacturers' Association Say That Talk of a $100,000,000 Combine Is Without Basis.

TOTAL CAPITAL NOW IS ONLY $25,000,000

Possibility of Consolidation of Mills Making the Same Class of Goods, with a View to Economy in Management.

Fall River, Feb. 4.—Well-informed mill men are skeptical regarding the rumor of a $100,000,000 mill trust in Fall River. The city's mill capitalization is but $25,000,000, and out of this must be reckoned three spinning plants owned by the New England Cotton Yarn Company, the Iron Works Mills, Troy, Pocasset, Union, Granite and Durfee mills, all close corporations.

About $15,000,000 worth of mill property remains as a trust possibility. Most of these plants are already family trusts, to the exclusion of others and their relatives own enough stock to control them.

A mill man who may be classed as an authority said to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter:

"In certain quarters it is desired to consolidate mills which make like goods. Class A, coarse goods, would include mills worth about $4,000,000. Class B, finer grades, about $5,000,000, and Class C, finest goods made here, about $8,000,000. The consolidation scheme, if put through, would save many high salaries and get rid of some incompetent managers. The scheme may receive a trial in the Class A stage this year if successful, it might be attempted in Class B, and so on. But it is all very doubtful."

It is also said that the basis of the consolidation talk is the fact that two heavy mill owners would like to get out, and it is believed that they started the talk. But no syndicate with money has appeared.

Attorney Richard F. Borden, mill owner and counsel for the Manufacturers' Association, and President N. B. Borden, of the latter, both say there is nothing in the latest report of a local mill trust.

AUTO LINES TO DISPLACE STAGES

Providence, R. I., Feb. 4.—The towns of Westerly and Weekpug are to be connected by an automobile freight and passenger line, the first of the kind to be established in the United States. Large touring cars are now being built, and it is expected that the service will be in operation early in the Spring.

The hundreds of Summer residents living in these two towns during the months each year caused a demand for the auto line, and a company composed of prominent citizens has completed the plans for the innovation began. The towns are now connected by stage coaches.

WINSHIP GUEST OF THE SCHOOLMASTERS

The High School Masters' Club held its annual banquet at the Quincy House yesterday afternoon. Charles H. Howe, of Wakefield, spoke on "The High School as a Sifter;" Charles T. Harper, of Quincy, on "The City High School;" Henry P. Porter, of Lexington, on "The Suburban High School;" Frank A. Hutchinson, of Weston, on "The Plight of the Small High School." Rev. A. E. Winship, of the Education Board of Education, was the guest of honor.

FAMOUS 4 HORSE CALLAHAN WHISKEY TEN YEARS OLD
EXPRESS PAID TO ANY R.R. POINT IN NEW ENGLAND

We Don't Want Your Money Unless You Find Callahan Whiskey All we Claim

We could not afford to refund your money for the mere asking, unless Callahan Whiskey was as good as we say.

We could not for FIFTY YEARS be the largest quantity of whiskey into New England of any distillery in America unless ours was the best.

Upon the nature and care of distilling depends the character, richness and flavor, strength and purity of a whiskey. With fifty years' careful study, we have reached a degree of perfection in distilling whiskey not attained by any of our distilleries. This enables us to produce the purest, most invigorating, mellow and healthful whiskey to be had.

This Special Offer to You—For a Limited Time

DON'T DELAY

IF YOU WANT TO SAVE the incidental costs and expenses of salesmen, wholesaler and retailer, and enjoy the pleasure and healthfulness of a guaranteed pure whiskey, at a price lower than ever before possible to you. Order it direct from the distillery to your home. Do it today. Send us $5.00 express money order (currency should only be sent in registered letter), and we will ship you in plain unmarked case four (4) full quarts of Callahan ten-year-old Pure Rye Whiskey, free of any transportation charges, to any railroad point in New England.

If you don't find the goods all we claim return them at our expense and we will refund your money. Could we say more? We take all the risk. We KNOW you will be pleased. Maybe your neighbor will join you in a trial order.

DON'T FORGET that our Bottles contain full quarts.

DECLARES ARMS OF ERIN WON INDEPENDENCE FOR AMERICA

PRIEST'S NEW BOOK SHARPLY ASSAILS THE ENGLISH.

Rev. Fr. C. J. Herlihy, in "The Celt Above the Saxon," Says England Lost Her American Colonies Through the Irish

BOOK IS DEDICATED TO THE HIBERNIANS

REV. C. J. HERLIHY.
Author of "The Celt Above the Saxon"

American Independence is due to the fact that there were so many Irishmen in Washington's army, says the Rev. C. J. Herlihy in his book, "The Celt Above the Saxon." It is dedicated to Division 5th A. O. H., of which the author was the first chaplain. Father Herlihy says that he wrote the book to correct the abnormal pride of the Saxon and "whilst criticising the weaknesses and faults of both of the Anglo-Saxons and Celts, point out also to each the good qualities of the other."

In demonstrating his belief that the Celts are superior to the Saxons in almost every respect, Father Herlihy points out that according to an English historian, the Saxons were no better than "sea wolves and pirates" when they first got a foothold in England and questions the basis of good humor of Englishmen who are proud of their ancestry.

"A nation of robbers from the beginning," Father Herlihy says, "England has not ceased to plunder all the weaker nations of the world even to the present day."

Calls Conquest a Blot.

Father Herlihy's idea of Britons in war may be shown by these statements:

"Even though far superior in arms to Ireland, England would never have conquered her if she had not been aided against herself.

"Her (England's) conquest of Ireland is the darkest stain in her character and even though conquered, Ireland's behavior at that trying period is the brightest jewel in her crown.

"England has been very courageous in attacking weaker nations; but she is very careful not to attack a strong power unless she has either powerful nation as her ally.

"Only twice in her history during fifteen centuries has England gone to war with a country as large as herself. Though only one in ten, the Boers made England the laughing stock of Europe.

"In the late Boer war, how often a stampede among the American mules was sufficient to defer the much-heralded Lord Hulman of his boasted colonies and nearly divided English forces into an uncontrollable panic." In fact, the British generals put the blame for nearly all their defeats on the American mules.

Recounts Irish Battles.

Father Herlihy recounts many battles in Ireland where the Irish soldiery, although greatly outnumbered, routed English armies that comprised picked troops. Of the affair at Boyne water, he says:

"It is true that the Orangemen can boast that they beat the Irish at the battle of he Boyne, but where is the record of veteran troops, well equipped in Europe, defeating a handful of poorly armed and badly organized peasantry, aided by a few companies of French regulars."

But if England overwhelmed the Irish at home by weight of numbers, Father Herlihy thinks that the latter made up such overseas by many defeats inflicted upon England abroad by Irish troops fighting in the ranks of Continental armies, as that of Fontenoy and Cremona.

But the greatest achievement of the Irish soldier abroad, as related in this book, was the aid he gave Americans in the war for independence.

Army Was One-Half Irish.

"It is a fact not generally known," says Father Herlihy, "that one-half the soldiers of the American revolutionary army were of Irish birth. Of this army there were two Irishmen to every native.

"Finally, after spending seventy millions of pounds and enduring the loss of one hundred thousand lives, England was forced to give up the struggle. She had lost her American colonies through the instrumentality of the Irish people. To this she is indebted for the loss of the finest and richest country in the world."

Father Herlihy says that, after comparing the English and the Irish on the basis of qualities required to constitute a good soldier, the evidence is conclusive "that the Irish, while not lacking in coolness, surpass the English in bravery and determination," He says:

"We must naturally conclude that the Irish make the better soldiers. Even the English themselves have acknowledged this, because in time of trouble they always so eagerly go after Irish subjects to fight for them. That is why in the past so many Ireland can get any concession from England; but on the first favorable opportunity she expels all of the East with this cry, she tries to conciliate Ireland by passing the land purchase act."

Sought Irish for Boer War.

Father Herlihy says the Boer war "knocked some of the conceit out of the heads of our Anglo-Saxon friends," and that in order to conquer a little handful of farmers England not only had to call on Australia and Canada, but "even Queen Victoria herself, with a shamrock in her hand, had to go over to Ireland begging for soldiers."

The author cites Froude and other English writers to substantiate what he relates about the atrocities and massacres inflicted upon Ireland by its conquerors. While he will not credit the English with extraordinary bravery or coolness on the battlefield, he says they certainly show tenacity.

"The English," he says, "though not at all the strongest or the bravest race, have by their dogged tenacity, aided by their cunning and trickery, been a match for even more powerful races than themselves. No matter how often they have been defeated, the English will again return to the attack; and there is no doubt they can endure a great deal of punishment.

"The secret of it is that the English government cares little for the life of ordinary soldiers; so she is ready to sacrifice any number of them in order to win the victory. She does not care as long as the English nobility do not fall in battle, England considers the life of every English lord more valuable than the lives of a thousand common soldiers."

Despoiled Into Poverty.

Father Herlihy attributes the poverty of the people of Ireland to the despoliation by the English, and laws intended not only to impoverish the Irish, but to keep them in ignorance. But he thinks that the poverty of the Irish is not wholly an evil.

"It is," he says, "their poverty which has always preserved in their hearts that spirit of independence which is the foundation of all virtue.

"I sincerely believe that it is mainly due to their poverty that the Irish people have always remained true to their faith in their religion. So I confidently trust that our Irish people will not be overawed even with wealth."

Father Herlihy thinks that American Ambassadors to the Court of St. James are prone to be dazzled by English high society, remarking:

Scores Our Ministers.

"Most of them become completely dis-Americanized; but John Hay became the worst Anglomaniac of them all. Many Americans believe that McKinley's whole administration was directed from London by that astute English politician, Joseph Chamberlain.

"They are firmly convinced that it was Chamberlain that embroiled the United States in war with Spain over Cuba, and directed her to seize upon the Philippine Islands so that the fate of ever England's lord more valuable than the lives of a thousand common soldiers."

LYNN PREACHER FOR WORCESTER CHURCH

Worcester, Feb. 4.—Rev. Clifton H. Mix, of Cliftondale, a suburb of Lynn, has been extended the call for the pastorate of Pilgrim Congregational Church to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Rev. Dr. Alexander Lowis.

Rev. Mr. Mix was born in Rickville, N. Y., thirty-six years ago. He graduated from Syracuse University in 1897. He has been identified with Y. M. C. A. work and secretary of the Yonkers and Clifford Springs associations. He was ordained to the ministry in 1902.

LAWRENCE POLES TO DEDICATE CHURCH

Lawrence, Feb. 5.—Polish residents are to dedicate to-day a $25,000 Roman Catholic church on Avon street with ceremonies befitting the occasion.

Poles will be present from Salem, Lynn, Lowell, and Manchester, N. H., and a parade, led by the president of the Catholic Institute of Essex County, will be one feature of the ceremony.

Bishop Brady, of Boston, will preside at the dedication exercises. The address will be by Rev. Father Chmielinski, of Boston.

DIVORCE FIGURES TO BE COLLECTED

Washington, Feb. 4.—A house bill, directing the Director of the Census to collect and publish cotton statistics, was amended in the Senate to-day to include the collection and publication of marriage and divorce statistics since 1887 and then was passed. This is in accordance with the recent request of the President.

DOVER DECLINES BIG APPOINTMENT

Washington, Feb. 4.—Secretary Palmer Dover, of the Republican National Committee, formerly private secretary to the late Senator Hanna, has declined an appointment as Assistant Secretary of the

WOMAN CUT OFF, TO FIGHT FOR MILLIONS

Pittsburg, Feb. 4.—Cut off with the income of $200,000 because she married a poor young dentist and did not name her first baby to suit her father's family, Mrs. W. S. Flower, will contest the will of her father, Mr. Lockhart, the Standard Oil King, who left $150,000,000.

It is said that Mrs. Flower has been offered $10,000,000 by the other four children if she will not contest the will, but she indignantly refused it and is determined to have her full share.

THRICE SPEECHLESS, DOCTORS BAFFLED

Worcester, Feb. 4.—Physicians throughout Worcester County are deeply interested in the case of Thure Hanson, a prominent Swedish citizen, thrice stricken dumb, who is under the care of Dr. Albert C. Getchell.

Mr. Hanson first lost his voice May 17, 1902, and was unable to speak for eight days. Electrical treatment restored his speech for two months, when he was again stricken for a few hours. Last October the man was again afflicted, and is now under medical care.

ITALIANS HELD ON SHOOTING CHARGE

New Haven, Feb. 4. The police to-day arrested Cosmo and Antonio Guglielmo, who, with their brother Guiseppe, are held in connection with the shooting of Joseph Capulo, in Pate street. Augustino and Calegaro Guglielmo, two more brothers who are wanted in the case, have escaped.

It is alleged by the police that Guiseppe Guglielmo held Capulo, while his brothers who have escaped fired five shots into his body. Guiseppe was held in $3,000 bonds this morning, and his brothers, Cosimo and Antonio, were held under $1000 bonds.

JAIL FOR SENDING PESTS IN THE MAIL

Washington, Feb. 4.—Representative Lovering, of Massachusetts, has introduced a bill in the House to prohibit the sending through the mail of insect pests. A person willfully violating the proposed law, upon conviction, is to be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000, or imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both.

BERTH FOR REYNOLDS.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The Massachusetts Senators have recommended the appointment of James B. Reynolds, of Boston, as assistant secretary of the treasury.

CLEVER DETECTIVE LANDED SUSPECT

Providence, R. I., Feb. 4—Detective Thomas F. Henry, of Pawtucket, captured Frederick G. Schmautzer, of Chicago, in this city and took him to Pawtucket to answer charges of breaking, entering and larceny. The arrest was the result of a clever bit of detective work.

The only clue left by the thief was a very small piece of his coat, which had caught on a nail in Abbott's Brick's store, which in his possession Detective Henry investigated in every detail, obtained a description and finally got a piece of Schmautzer, and found him after an hour's search.

$10,000 FIRE LOSS IN NEWPORT BLOCK

Newport, R. I., Feb. 4.—Fire in the De Bolce block to-day for a time threatened the destruction of the structure. The entire department was called out, and the flames were confined to the second floor. The loss is about $10,000; fully covered by insurance.

DICKSON, PENN'S COACH.

Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—Byron H. Dickson has been appointed head coach of the University of Pennsylvania football team for next season.
